Disorderly House - Frances Giles was charged on the information of John Thomson with keeping a disorderly house at Oxford. He stated he was a neighbour of hers and that her house was frequented by men at all hours that the frequently heard very offensive language used and drinking and dancing going on which was a great annoyance to him and the neighbours. Enoch Cole corroborated this statement as did also Richard Morris who said he had occasion to go there in company with another man for his son William to take him home, that he heard dancing and great noise and saw a man go with two buckets of beer to the house that his son did not go with him at that time, and he subsequently returned and saw men with coats off and sleeves turned up as if going to fight. The place was a nuisance to him and the neighbours. In reply to the Bench Sergeant Muller stated that this woman's husband left her about a year ago and since then she kept by repute a house of ill-fame but that he never knew the woman to conduct herself disorderly in the streets. Accused in defence said there was a drunken man at her house on one occasion but she could not get him out and as to Morris's statement it was he and his wife who abused and called her insulting names at her own house. Mr Woodfield who was called stated that accused received some money from time to time from a person who wrote to her. The Bench cautioned her as to her conduct and gave her one month to clear out of the place she now occupies.

The Family History of William MORRIS and Rosalie BEAMISH

Rosalie BEAMISH was born about 1865 Australia. Her parents were Rosana formerly LOIDOFF and John BEAMISH.

Rosalie BEAMISH was age 11 years when she settled in East Oxford New Zealand around 1876. This was according to her 1884 intention to marry application, which stated that she had dwelled in East Oxford for 8 years and that 'there was no person in the colony having authority to give consent to the minor to marry'. Rosalie could have left Australia and arrived in New Zealand with a distant relative after her parents died in Australia or perhaps her mother was widowed and came to New Zealand under another surname name. Additional research will have to be done to confirm.

Memories from Great Grandson Ray Ivory
His name was Bill MORRIS but he was called Schubert. He was married twice.
His first wife was called Grandma MORRIS and his second wife was called Granny MORRIS. I remember him as an old man, sitting on a chair near his gate, his hat over his eyes, always chewing nuts or lollies, enjoying the sun. He mostly had his eyes closed against the light. I would ride past on my bike and call out, "Good morning Great granddad!"
And he would reply, "G'day! Who are you?" He wouldn't even open his eyes to see who I was. The story told about him was that he quit work when he was 50. He either had a row or someone had teased him over the number of children he had (12) - I don't know, but he downed tools one day and declared that he would never work again; and he lived till he was 91. (It has been suggested that he was injured in an accident, felling trees.) He never did another tap of work in his life. Old Granny would cut the wood and do all the jobs. What's more, she used to go out and work, while he stayed home and smoked his pipe all day. It was said of him that he was so lazy that he wouldn't have got out of bed if the house caught fire. But the best story about him was this: Great-grandmother Rose was due to have a baby, and she woke up in the middle of the night with things starting to happen. "Bill," she called out, "Can you go and get the doctor?" "Aw, Rose," he said, "can't you put it off until the morning?" This is true.
Another story about Great-granddad Schubert. When he was younger he was some sort of assistance to the local sheriff. It was his job one day to escort a prisoner from Oxford to Christchurch. They set off for Christchurch in a horse and cart. It was a scorching nor-west day, which made for thirsty work. At Woodend, old Schubert felt the pressing need for a cold beer. He pulled up at the Woodend pub, tied the horse to a rail and went in for a drink, leaving the prisoner outside. When he came out, the horse and the cart and the prisoner had all disappeared. He never really lived that one down.

#Rosalie BEAMISH (Rosa BONISCH) was age 11 years when she settled in East Oxford New Zealand around 1876. This was according to her 1884 intention to marry application, which stated that she had dwelled in East Oxford for 8 years and that 'there was no person in the colony having authority to give consent to the minor to marry'. Rosalie could have left Australia and arrived in New Zealand with a distant relative after her parents died in Australia or perhaps her mother was widowed and came to New Zealand under another surname name. #Morris William - Settler, East Oxford. Mr Morris was born in Warrington, England, in 1848, and came to Lyttleton by the ship "British Crown" in 1863. After a short period in Christchurch he went to Oxford, where he has since been engaged in bush work. He was for sixteen years a member of the Loyal Oxford Lodge of Oddfellows. Mr Morris was married in 1876, to a daughter of the late Mr Richard Johnson, of West Oxford. His wife died in June 1883, leaving three sons and two daughters. In May 1884 Mr Morris contacted a second marriage with a daughter of the late Mr John Bamish, of Australia, and five sons and two daughters have been born of this union reference Christchurch Museum Library "The Cyclopedia of New Zealand Vol 3 page 502 Oxford photo by "Tolputt and Clarke"
