The Family History of Richard Woodward MORRIS and Alice WELLS

Richard Woodward MORRIS was born about 09 May 1829 Warrington Lancaster England. He was the illegitimate child of Ann MORRIS and we believe Richard WOODWARD. It would be another 2 years before Richard was baptised.

When I began researching this ancestor he was only known as Richard MORRIS it was not until many years of research that he was also known as Richard Woodward MORRIS.

According to the military records of Richard Woodward MORRIS he would have been born about May 1829 in Warrington Lancaster. When Richard became a private on 08 May then his birth would work out to be 09 May. Please note that quote "full age of a male or female is twenty one years which age is completed on the day preceding the anniversary of a person's birth."

(Reference publication Blackstone's Commentaries on the Laws of England information forwarded by Morris family researcher in England)

Information from a now deceased descendant stated that the MORRIS family are believed to have travelled from France to Cornwall and could have been Huguenots. I have been unable to locate any confirmation of this but will keep researching.

I was informed by a New Zealand researcher that Richard MORRIS served with the British Imperial Force, 14th Foot Regiment in the Crimean War and that an article appeared in a New Zealand newspaper "The Oxford" confirming the details. To date I have been unable to locate the newspaper article as many of the early Oxford newspapers have not survived. I did however locate Richard attending a military funeral in 1881 and the article stated that "Richard Morris late H.M. 14th Buckinghamshire (2 medals and 1 bar) served in the Crimea".

I previously written to the Public Records Office now National Archives in England plus searched the soldiers' documents on microfilm in New Zealand and found no trace for a Richard MORRIS. Years later I personally searched the records at National Archives in England and located information that a Richard Woodward MORRIS served in the 14th Regiment during the Crimean period. I believe that this was our Richard MORRIS and it has now been confirmed by another MORRIS family researcher in England that indeed he is the same person.

On 8 February 1847 Richard Woodward MORRIS enlisted as a soldier boy in the 14th Regiment of Foot at Warrington Lancashire aged 17 years 9 months. His service number was #2721. Private Morris served for 9 years and 67 days and was discharged in Mullingan on 29 August 1856. When discharged his description was age 27 years 2 months, 5 feet 5 inches & 5 feet 8 inches height, dark brown hair, dark brown eyes, fair complexion, and trade labourer. There were four pages of service documents for Richard Woodward MORRIS.

The Crimean War took place 1853-1856 between Turkey, supported by Great Britain, France and Sardinia and the [Czar] Russian Empire. A peaceful settlement was concluded on March 30 1856 by the Treaty of Paris. Further research undertaken proves that Richard did not see service in the Crimean War.

Upon enlisting in the 14th Regiment Richard travelled to Ireland to join his regiment.

In 1849 the 14th Regiment was stationed in Newport Mon Wales but Richard was with a detachment based in Carmarthen Barracks Wales. This would be where he met and married his first wife Esther MORRIS.

Esther MORRIS was born about 1826 Saint Peter Carmarthen Wales. Her father was Richard MORRIS occupation maltster.

The Crimean War took place between 1853 and 1856 and a peaceful settlement was concluded on March 30 1856. Richard's service records stated that he saw no overseas service so this proves that he did not serve in the Crimean War.

Richard and Esther had a son John MORRIS who was born 1856 Carmarthenshire Wales

ORDER (Reference RGO UK birth registration 1856 Carmarthen district county Carmarthenshire Dyfed Pembrokeshire Wales [1] 1856 March quarter volume 11a page 560 [2] June quarter volume 11a page 635 [3] September quarter volume 11a page 591)

Richard Woodward MORRIS was discharged from the British force on 29 August 1856 in Mullingan Ireland. The service records state that he had no overseas service but he did achieve promotion to Corporal on 20 April 1855 a rank which he held until 02 March 1856 when he was reduced in rank to Private having spent the previous 2 months in an Army jail.

Richard's final discharge was on 13 October 1856 (character Indifferent) with place of residence given as Lincoln England. His last contact with the War Office was towards the end of 1869 when a letter (reference G48989) of reply was sent to Richard on 26 November 1869.

The above 1869 reference might have been in connected to Richard's letter of application dated 22 February 1869 for appointment of Clerk and Bailiff at Oxford New Zealand to His Honour the Superintendent to the Canterbury Provincial Council. Perhaps Richard sent a copy to England to place on his military file but the letter took 7 months to reach the War Office.

After Richard was discharged from the 14th Regiment he deserted his wife Esther sometime between October 1856 and before 19 December 1858 as this is when he married Alice WELLS.

Richard's first wife Esther was still living and Richard had not divorce her so our Richard MORRIS became a bigamist.

I will continue below with the details of his first wife's life until her death in 1890. Then I will follow with the details of Richard and his second wife Alice WELLS.

After Richard deserted Esther she remained in Wales working hard to support their three children Richard, Sarah and John MORRIS.

Richard MORRIS made an application for free passage to New Zealand. This was accepted but he did not have the money to purchase articles for the journey so he approached the Board of Guardians for assistance and details are recorded in the Warrington Guardian dated 18 April 1863.

Warrington Guardian 18 April 1863

Board of Guardians

The usual weekly meeting of the board was held on Wednesday last. Mr Beckly in chair.

Emigration

The following letter from the Rev W Quekett sector was read:

Rectory April 15th 1863

Gentlemen - The bearer MORRIS with his wife and family have obtained free passage for New Zealand. I shall feel obliged if you will inform me whether the board will assist them with outfits. He has his embarkation order with him; where in the quantities required for the voyage is mentioned. There are 30 souls in all that are about to leave and the little funds I have collected will not be sufficient for all their outfits; therefore, I shall feel obliged by an answer in this point before I make further appeal to my friends. If my presence should be desired at the board. I shall be happy to attend and give any information, in my powers, before I leave for London tomorrow.

I am & a - W Quekett

A letter was also read from Richard MORRIS asking the board to grant him articles he needed. On being called into the board room, he stated in reply to the chairman that he was now out of work and had no means of maintaining himself and family. He was going to New Zealand in the hope of bettering his position; but before he could embark it was necessary that he should have an outfit, consisting of certain articles of clothing, which he hoped the board would allow him. About twelve months ago he had two weeks relief from the board, but had not either before or since, been chargeable to the parish. He had no furniture, nor any clothing but those in which he stood. The chairman said it seemed to be a case in which the board might, with great propriety, make a grant. The man would, in all probability become chargeable to the rates unless assistance was given to him to emigrate. Some conversation took place on the subject on the course of which several members of the board expressed their concurrence in the chairman's opinion, and it was ultimately decided that Mr Bancroft should be instructed to enquire into the circumstances of the applicant and report to the board next week, when the case would be taken into consideration. The chairman said with regard to the thirty persons mentioned by the Rector, the board could bind themselves to any course, or agree to give any sum, without knowing the circumstances of the parties. The case of each applicants must be decided on its merits: and if they were persons receiving relief, or had received relief and were likely to become again chargeable, they would upon the report of the relieving officer, give assistance as they thought necessary.

Warrington Guardian Saturday 25 April 1863 page 6c

Emigration - Mr Bancroft, relieving officer, having reported the information he had obtained relative to the man MORRIS, who applied to the board last week to defray the cost of his outfit to New Zealand, the Board resolved that it was not a suitable case in which assistance could be granted. There was no other business.

Lyttelton – Arrived – August 17 British Crown ship 1121 tons Whitefield from Liverpool with Government immigrants

About 3 o'clock on Saturday afternoon a ship was described in the offering, and shortly after the harbour master was on his way down the harbour, with a fair wind at that time; the ship was about 10 miles from land, and on boarding her she proved to be the British Crown, from Birkenhead, with the first batch of the Lancashire immigrants sent out under the superintendent of her Majesty's Government Emigration Commissioners. The vessel anchored for the night near the Heads, and on Sunday the slight breeze from S.E. enabled her to come up the harbour, as far as the red buoy beyond Camp Bay. On Sunday afternoon the Commissioners reported the ship with a clean bill of health, but gave orders to prevent people boarding. This order had the effect of preventing our reporter from visiting the ship, and it was only through the courtesy of Captain Sproul he was enabled to do so on Monday morning; many of the people and the watermen having been refused. On getting aboard, every attention was shown, and information freely given. The British Crown was built at Boston U.S., in Nov 1858, is 1,150 tons register old measurement: length of lower deck 178 feet, and 23 feet beam, with 8 feet space between decks at the main hatch, She is part owned by Messrs W H Daunt & Co of Liverpool. Since the commencement of the war in America she has changed hands, having previously been called the Franklyn Haven, when carrying the U.S. flag. The Captain left the tug steamer off the Tursca light on the 6th May, with immigrants, numbering 406 souls, or 342½ statute adults. Nothing of importance occurred during the passage out, with the exception of adverse winds and calms; crossed the line on the 8th June in 34 long., passed the meridian of the Cape July 7; sighted St Pauls on the 22nd, the only land seen till passing the Snares on Wednesday, August 11th; a good run to the Heads, with fair wind, making the voyage in 103 days from the docks. Twelve deaths occurred all children and 9 births. The ship is in command of Captain Whitfield, and the passengers are under the medical superintendent of Dr Jollie; this gentleman is selected for his office by the Emigration Commissioners at home, and is entitled to a gratuity of £1 per head on all passengers landed alive. The people speak in high terms of praise, of the captain, doctor, and officers of the ship for their unceasing endeavours to make them comfortable. An address was presented to our Local Commissioners, thanking the Government for the assistance rendered to the passengers and their families, and another is to be forwarded to the Emigration Commissioners at home for providing them with every possible comfort and convenience during the voyage. Dr Donald, on behalf of our Government, made a suitable reply, giving them a welcome to Canterbury. The ship, internally, presented an appearance creditable to all concerned - captain, officers, crew, and passengers; she is a real specimen of cleanliness, and her arrangements much superior to what we have hitherto witnessed under the old regulations. She carried one of Normandy's apparatus for distilling fresh water, capable of supplying 300 tons gallons per diem, with the consumption of an average of 500lbs of coal. The British Crown is the first ship from Liverpool direct for Canterbury, and is consigned to Messrs. Dalgety, Buckley & Co; she brings 501 tons of general cargo, but no cabin passengers.

The Ship British Crown - This ship was visited by his Honour the Superintendent on Thursday last, accompanied by Mr Murray Aynsley. The visitors expressed themselves highly gratified with the arrangements for the accommodation and comfort of the passengers. This must be considered a compliment by Capt. Whitfield and his officers, as it is seldom the shipping in our port, particularly the immigrant's vessels, receives the honour of such a visit. No doubt the good character the British Crown has acquired for superiority has induced this visit, and we trust that all our future immigrant ships may deserve the same mark of approbation.

Richard, Alice and their family may have settled in Christchurch first and later moved to Oxford but the exact date is unknown.

Richard MORRIS did not appear on the petition dated 31 December 1863 and signed by 24 Oxford residents to the Superintendent of the Canterbury Province. Perhaps Richard and his family were not living in Oxford at this time.

Kaiapoi - Tuesday March 11, 1871 - Before G L Mellish Esq., R.M. Supposed Escape from Custody of a Bailiff - Alexander Smith was brought up in custody of Sergeant Davis of Oxford where he had been arrested charged on warrant with escaping from legal custody. It appeared from all the facts brought out that Morris the bailiff to the Oxford Court had arrested accused a week since on a warrant of commitment and took him to Lyttelton. When there from accused's version of the affair Morris wanted to know what he must do. Accused said he might get a relation near Kaiapoi to arrange the matter whether they returned. Morris gave him leave to arrange the affair and come to him on the following morning. The morning however came and there was no appearance of the debtor. Hence the warrant being issued and these proceedings. His Worship dismissed the case

Disorderly House - Frances Giles was charged on the information of John Thomson with keeping a disorderly house at Oxford. He stated he was a neighbour of hers and that her house was frequented by men at all hours that the frequently heard very offensive language used and drinking and dancing going on which was a great annoyance to him and the neighbours. Enoch Cole corroborated this statement as did also Richard Morris who said he had occasion to go there in company with another man for his son William to take him home, that he heard dancing and great noise and saw a man go with two buckets of beer to the house that his son did not go with him at that time, and he subsequently returned and saw men with coats off and sleeves turned up as if going to fight.

The place was a nuisance to him and the neighbours. In reply to the Bench Sergeant Muller stated that this woman's husband left her about a year ago and since then she kept by repute a house of ill-fame but that he never knew the woman to conduct herself disorderly in the streets. Accused in defence said there was a drunken man at her house on one occasion but she could not get him out and as to Morris's statement it was he and his wife who abused and called her insulting names at her own house. Mr Woodfield who was called stated that accused received some money from time to time from a person who wrote to her. The Bench cautioned her as to her conduct and gave her one month to clear out of the place she now occupies.

One of the worst of the early gales recorded struck closed to the district of Oxford on 9 September 1876. It blew down a church close beside the school at View Hill, swept away the shelter at the Bexley railway siding near Waimakariri Gorge, and destroyed the early crops. Another nor-wester struck in September two years later in what the residents called 'black Monday'. St Andrew's church at East Oxford was blown off its foundations: the Methodist church was scattered over the landscape, the lock-up at West Oxford was blown away, fowls and fowl-houses went with the wind, a girl organist was lifted by one gust and thrown on top of a gorse hedge and tons of earth was swept from cultivated fields leaving them bare.

I was told that there was a photo of Richard MORRIS at the Oxford Town (A & P) Hall at Oxford North Canterbury. On a visit to Oxford I took a photograph of the image which was hung high on the wall in the supper room. Unfortunately the photo did not come out clearly. Perhaps on my next visit I will see if I can take the photo off the wall and take another image of Richard MORRIS.

I.O.G.T. – A meeting of the Perseverance Lodge was held at the Central Oxford Town Hall on Friday last. There was a very good attendance. Brother R. Morris informed the lodge that he and his family would require a clearance car as he was leaving the district. He said he regretted very much his severance from the lodge as he had taken great interest in Good Templary since its introduction into the neighbourhood. He was however about to remove to Dunedin where he hoped to be enabled to make himself further useful in the cause for wherever he went he should always be ready to assist to the utmost of his power those now battling against the greatest curse to society. The lodge expresses its regret at Brother Morris's withdrawal and also its admiration of his conduct as a consistent Good Templar. It was unanimously resolved to present him with a third degree regalia. After a very enjoyable meeting the lodge was closed in due form.

The New Zealand Blondin - Last evening young Morris the New Zealand Blondin made his debut at the New Oddfellows' Hall. The attendance was for the first appearance of a comparatively unknown aspirant to public favour very good. The first portion of the entertainment consisted of a vocal and instrumental concert under the leadership of Herr Bunz. The orchestral selections were well rendered and the songs of Messrs Cardell, Hammond, and Hamilton, were warmly applauded. Miss Patti Rosa gained a hearty encore, to which she good-naturedly responded. The second part of the entertainment was however the attraction of the evening. Morris who was a very youthful appearance was attired in a becoming costume and to the strains of See the Conquering hero comes he stepped on to the rope his confident bearing creating a highly favourable impression. Keeping time to the music he made a preliminary journey and then a rapid one in the midst of which he halted assuming various positions standing on his head on the rope and throwing himself suddenly on his back. The applause was deafening and it was at once apparent that the New Zealand Blondin had achieved success. He then traversed the rope blindfolded and with a loose bag drawn over him an uncertainty of stop being well simulated. Next came some astonishing chair feats Morris balancing the chair on the rope and then climbing over it. He also seated himself upon the top rail of the chair back finally slinging it over his shoulder and carrying it to the starting place. He then carried his father over the additional weight apparently not making the least difference to him. His next feat was to carry to the centre of the rope a combined chair and table and to partake of refreshment and in this feat an extraordinary specimen of balancing was unintentionally given. The wood work at the bottom had a series of slight grooves in order to give some hold upon the rope but in setting the cumbrous apparatus down Morris missed some of these grooves and his position appeared the more awkward. There was not however the slightest perceptible tremor and he appeared as unconcerned as if seated at a table in the ordinary manner coolly dusting his table and packing his utensils neatly away in a drawer before rising from his chair. He then took a barrow forward and backward and made his final bow for the evening amid hearty cheers his father announcing that this evening some new feats would be introduced. The Manilla rope appears to be of smaller diameter than the one Blondin used but we understand that they are identical in size and that in point of fact they were manufactured by the same firm. For so young a man Morris must be regarded as a performer of unusual excellence and his entertainment is decidedly worth witnessing.

The N Z Blondin - The first performance of the colonial emulator of the fame of the world famous Blondin took place last evening. It is much to be regretted that the weather turned unfavourable just as the entertainment was about to begin and consequently the effect was a little marred as the attendance was sensibly lessened. Notwithstanding the dampness which must have rendered the numerous feats doubly perilous a long and difficult programme was gone through. The various feats were such as to excite the wonder of the onlookers while the ease with which they were done entirely removed the fear which a clumsy performer would have excited. A most discreditable feature of the evening's amusement was the number who availed themselves of the view to be obtained from the street thus evading the small charge made for admission. We have the authority of Mr Morris for saying that any person professing his inability to pay for entrance will be allowed to witness the performance gratis and we trust that for the credit of the town that none will be so niggardly as to share in what they are unwilling to pay for. There will be a matinee this afternoon at two o'clock at which the Volunteer Band will assist and which is advertised as being under the patronage of Sir John Richardson and we are confident that all those who admire daring will be in attendance and record their appreciation of what is really a first class exhibition.

Blondin – There was but a moderate attendance at Blondin's performance last night notwithstanding the presence of the band which played up from the Albion Hotel. In thanking the spectators for their patronage Mr Morris sen. Announced that probably tonight would be the last on which Blondin would appear in Invercargill. Those therefore who have not seen him should not miss the opportunity and those who have may avail themselves of the last chance of witnessing his daring feats.

The Southland Times Friday 22 April 1881

A Case of some interest came before the Waste Lands Board yesterday and was stated by Mr Richard Morris s deferred payment, settler at Taringatura. It is well known that the only Government sales of land being made in this district at present are those on deferred payments and in Taringatura as many as 20 sections have been taken up recently averaging more than 200 acres each. Mr Morris is one of 15 selectors who hold licenses for as many of these sections and his complaint to the Board was that owing to the want of a road these selections could not get upon their holdings to build houses and plough the land and that they were likely in consequence to lose a season. Mr Morris stated further that the delay in making the road in question arose from the circumstances that the Oreti Road Board was waiting to be merged partly on the Wallace County Council and in the meantime refused to spend any money. The chairman of the Waste Lands Board informed the applicant that it was with the Road Board alone that he had to do and that the Waste Lands Board was powerless to help him. But the hardship of the case lies in this that the Oreti Road Board had now at its credit some £1900 received from the Government out of deferred payment moneys and received for the express purpose of making roads for the benefit of deferred payment lands. It appears simple monstrous that such money should be hoarded pending the action of the Road Board in reference to sinking its existence in the two countries. We are informed that there are two selectors from Dunedin encamped at present with their teams and new machinery at Hillend Bush who like the others are getting. On the ground it seems as if the Road Board were forgetting its primary duty and inflicting an unnecessary hardship by with-holding money as it is doing and neglecting the immediate formation of a road where it is so urgently required. If we are not misinformed the road is already laid off and only a temporary formation at a small cost would suffice to enable the settlers who are waiting to get forward. It is surely a case' where a little exertion might be made and we trust the Oreti Road Board will be induced to bestir itself. We are quite aware that it requires a resolution of the Road Board and the subsequent sanction of the Waste Lands Board before roads can be declared those on which deferred-payment money can be expended. But if these preliminaries are necessary there is all the more need for speedy action. It will be three months before another application for merging can be made by the Oreti Road Board. But the truth is that their expending or not expending at once the money in question has no connection whatever with the business of merging and will not in the slightest degree affect the application. The money is held in trust and the Board has no duty but at once to lay it out for the purposes for which it was destined. The equities and urgency of the case ought to be stimulus enough for the Board, but if it should prove otherwise then we have no doubt that somewhere there lie the means of bringing legal pressure to bear in the way of forcing them to do their duty.

Assault - John Gardiner was charged with having on the 25th November at Otautau assaulted one Richard Morris. Mr A C Henderson appeared for the complainant and Mr O'Reilly for the defendant. Richard Morris deposed that on the date in question he went to Otautau as bailiff to execute a distress warrant against the defendant. He took possession of the store in defendant's absence. When defendant arrived there he asked complainant how he got in and he had said he had got in by the back door. Gardiner ordered him out but he would not go out. The defendant cooled down until about ten o'clock at night when he took advantage of complainant's back being turned to seize him by the arms put his knee in the small of complainant's back and wrenched his arm. Complainant asked him not to break his arms but Gardiner replied that he would break his b--neck. Gardiner managed to get him out but he managed to regain admittance to the premises early the following morning by means of a subterfuge. The defendant ordered him out again but he said he would not go out alive whereupon Gardiner used various threats towards him. The defendant was very drunk at the time. When Gardiner put him out forcibly he threatened to shoot him if he attempted to return. He (complainant) had suffered considerable pain in his arms and back through the assault. Constable Joyce deposed that Morris had complained to him of the assault and when witness spoke to defendant the latter said he had merely put his arms round the old man and lifted him out. Some days afterwards Morris again complained and said he would not stop alone in the house. Gardiner arrived at the time and said that if Morris was afraid he would go away altogether and stop at the hotel. The defendant stated that when the complainant came to the place he had no warrant and he (defendant) told him in the evening that he ought to know his duty better than to take possession before producing a warrant. To illustrate the legal position of affairs he put his arms round Morris and gently lifted him out on to the veranda. They had then a peaceable talk and defendant afterwards threw himself on the bed and fell asleep. When Morris was there he (defendant) did all he could to make him comfortable. The plaintiff recalled said he had shown the warrant to the defendant about a quarter of an hour after the latter had entered the house. The defendant said Morris did not show him the warrant till the following day. His Worship said there was no doubt but an assault had been committed. The complainant had gone to defendant's place in the discharge of his duty and had been wrongfully and forcibly put out. He would probably not have done so had he been sober but he was not sober and it was necessary that bailiffs going about the country doing their duty should be protected. The defendant would be fined L5, with costs L1 10s in default fourteen days imprisonment.

Southland Times newspaper 18 January 1890

Hugh McIntosh was charged with having on the 10th inst. sold two glasses of whisky to one Richard Morris he not being a licensed person under the Act. Sergeant Macdonnell conducted the prosecution and Mr Brodrick appeared for the defendant Detective Maddern deposed that he visited the defendant place at Wrights Bush at 3.30 p.m. on the 10th inst. He was going into a room when a female tried to shut the door. He walked in however, and saw a glass with whisky in it on the mantelpiece and also a bottle containing the same kind of liquor. A man named Gutzmetz put ginger ale in the whisky and it was drunk by another man named Morris. Witness had a bottle of ginger ale himself paid for it and went out but in consequence of something he returned and accused McIntosh of selling whisky to the men who were present. The defendant replied that he kept whisky in the house for himself. Witness then searched the cupboards and found four bottles containing whisky, and in another room behind the shop he found nine bottles full. He took all the liquor away except about a bottle which he left because McIntosh said he could not do without a drop of whisky. McIntosh admitted that the men had whisky from one of the bottles found in the cupboard in the front room. By Mr Brodrick he went to the place specially to catch McIntosh. He did not arrange with Morris beforehand to catch McIntosh. When inside the house however he called on Morris to take charge of the whisky found in the cupboard while he searched the rest of the house. He did not taste the liquor he saw in the glass but judged it to be whisky from its appearance. McIntosh did not try to conceal anything while witness was in the house. Richard Morris deposed that he was in the defendant's store on the day in question about 2.30 p.m. Witness first had some milk to drink but being hot and having walked a long distance it made him ill. He therefore asked the woman who was there for a drop of brandy but she said she had none and gave him some whisky which he drank with ginger ale. The defendant was present at the time. After witness had eaten some bread and cheese he paid for the whisky. The butcher Gutzmetz then arrived and witness asked him to have a nip. The butcher said he would and McIntosh supplied him with a whisky from an inner room witness paying for them for two bottles of ginger ale and for the bread and cheese to a woman in the defendant's presence. The butcher then went away and returned in about ten minutes when witness who was going to get a drive to town with him called for two whiskies. They were then in another room and McIntosh produced a bottle from the cupboard. Witness gave McIntosh 2s to take 1s 6d from for the two whiskies and a bottle of ginger ale and just at this stage Detective Maddern entered the room. The detective asked for a bottle of ginger ale drank it paid for it and went out. Afterwards witness went outside to go away in the cart when the detective said he intended to make a case against McIntosh announced that he had a search warrant and called on witness to assist him. When witness went into the house McIntosh whispered to him "say you only had bread and cheese and ginger ale." By Mr Brodrick He had not previously arranged with the detective to go to McIntosh's. When witness paid the woman she said the bread and cheese would be sixpence. There was no arrangement that witness was to be paid for acting as informer he had not turned informer yet. Frederick Gutzmetz deposed that when Morris asked him to have a drink he had some ginger ale with whisky in it. Witness did not see any money pass. He always had whisky when he went there Mr McIntosh always shouted for him. On this occasion however it was Morris who asked him to drink and witness said he would and helped himself to some whisky from a bottle that was on the mantelpiece. Subsequently Morris asked witness to have a ginger ale and he had one he did not notice what Morris asked for. Witness did not pour anything into Morris's glass. He did not see any money pass on this occasion either. By Mr Brodrick when Morris asked him to have a drink he did not think that he (Morris) was going to pay for it. He had never seen whisky sold in McIntosh's place. This was the case for the prosecution. Hugh McIntosh the defendant deposed that he did not sell any whisky to Morris on the 10th inst., nor did he see him get any in the house. He did not see Morris pay any money to Mrs Thomson witness's housekeeper. Morris did not ask for two whiskies when he was with the butcher nor did he pay him (defendant) any money. He did not keep whisky for sale but for himself and his customers who would often rather have a glass of whisky from him when they paid their accounts than 2 per cent discount. He had been accustomed to whisky from his birth it was a poor day that he did not have three nips and he sometimes had ten he could not do without it. It was Morris who said to him "mind stick to this very hard bread and cheese and ginger ale for me. On a previous occasion Morris said he was a teetotaller and could not take whisky. Had Morris taken the whisky at that time he (defendant) might have charged him for it. By Sergeant Macdonnell Whisky was very cheap about Wrights Bush. He sometimes got a bit mixed with whisky but he was as sober as a judge the day Morris visited the store. He might have had three whiskies that day but not more. His Worship remarked that defendant did not appear to be in a fit condition to give evidence he was not sober. Witness said he had had four whiskies before coming to court but was sober enough to answer the sergeant. His Worship said the defendant's condition was such that little reliance could be placed on what he said. Elizabeth Thomson housekeeper to the previous witness deposed that when Morris came to the store he was shaking and hungry and got some bread and cheese and ginger ale from witness. He did not get any milk from her and she never gave him any whisky. He paid her 1s 6d, 6d for the bread and cheese and 1s for the two bottles of ginger ale which he and the butcher had. Whisky was not kept in the store for sale she had never seen any sold during the five years she had been there. McIntosh was too good in giving it away. A bottle of whisky was standing on the mantelpiece on the day in question and the butcher was welcome to help himself. By Sergeant Macdonnell no women had complained to her of their husbands spending their earnings in the house on drink. It was not a sly-grog shop no matter what the people of the surrounding district might say. This was the case for the defence. His Worship said there cannot be a conviction on the evidence. The witnesses on one side or the other have perjured themselves. There can be no doubt of that and it is too often the case more frequent of late I think than it used to be. It is positively disgraceful that I should have to sit here and listen to the perjuries that are continually committed in that box. The case will be dismissed.

Southland Times newspaper 28 January 1890

Police Court - Monday, 27th - January - Alleged Violet Seizure from a Bailiff - Daniel McCallum was charged with having on the 23rd January seized a number of cattle which one Richard Morris had taken possession of under a warrant of the District Court in the case Kennard v McCallum. Mr Rattray appeared for the informant and Mr Matthews for the defendant. Mr Rattray said there were three other charges against the defendant one of having assaulted Morris on the 23rd and two of having assaulted Kennard who was assisting Morris. He suggested that the four cases should be heard together. Mr Matthews said they could not be heard together. It was alleged that one of the assaults had taken place on the 22nd and the others and the seizure on the 23rd and that two different persons had been attacked. Mr Rattray opened by stating that the informant Morris instructed by the bailiff of the District Court proceeded to the defendant's place at Waianiwa on the 22nd inst. to seize his goods and chattels under a warrant. The informant was accompanied by Kennard as assistant. When they arrived at defendant's place they seized some horses and a cart. The defendant got very excited took a rail from a fence threatened them with it and threw Kennard down. The two then left to get police assistance and the defendant took the horses away. On the following morning they returned seized some cattle and drove them away. When they had got near Wallacetown Crossing they were overtaken by the defendant who was again in a very excited state. He headed the cattle and turned them back and on Morris and Kennard trying to stop him he assaulted both throwing a stone at Kennard and striking Morris with a whip. Counsel believed that there would be some dispute as to the ownership of the cattle that it would be alleged they were the private property of the defendant's wife. Even if this were the case the defendant counsel submitted had no right take the law into his own hands and seize from the bailiff. If the cattle were not the defendant's there was a proper legal process by which the rightful owner could recover possession. Evidence in support of the information was given by W B Godfrey, R. Morris, and Simon Kennard. Mr Matthews submitted that the case must be dismissed as the bailiff of the District Court. Mr Godfrey had not given the informant a proper warrant to seize. The bailiff of the District Court had only the same powers as the sheriff of the Supreme Court who was always required to issue a warrant under his seal. The Bench intimated that they considered Morris had been properly authorised by the bailiff of the Court but at Mr Matthews request took a note of the point raised. Jane McCallum wife of the defendant deposed that the cattle seized by the informant were her property she having received them from her father as a wedding present seven years ago. Daniel McCallum the defendant deposed that he made no objection to the bailiff taking the horse on the evening of the 22nd but when he saw Kennard going towards his (defendants) paddock he warned him not to enter in. Morris and Kennard consulted and talked of going to Thornbury for police assistance. He told them it was unnecessary and that they could take the horses with them. They went away without taking possession of the horse. He then went to one of his land lords a Mr Brooks to whom some arrears of rent were due and agreed to give him three horses and place them on Mr Brooks property. Next morning when Morris seized the cattle he (defendant) was in the act of bringing other three horses from a different part of his leasehold property to replace the three given to Mr Brooks. He followed Morris and Kennard and took possession of the cattle believing that in doing so he was exercising a legal right as they belonged to his wife and not to him. He used no violence towards Morris and Kennard either on the 22nd or the 23rd and did not even speak to them on the latter date. Alex. Harkness deposed that he had seen McCallum turn the cattle on the road near Wallacetown Crossing and had witnessed no violent conduct or stone-throwing. Their Worships considered a case had been made out and that the defendant had wrongfully seized the cattle. If the cattle were not his the owner had her proper remedy at law. However, under the circumstances, the Court considered that a fine of 20s and costs LI 18s 6d. Mr Rattray said that as the position and authority of Morris as bailiff had been vindicated he would withdraw the charge against McCallum of having assaulted him. The two charges of assaulting Kennard were quite different however and counsel felt bounded to proceed with them as the informant was in actual bodily fear of the defendant. Daniel McCallum was then charged with having assaulted Simon Kennard on the 22nd and again on the 23rd it being agreed to hear the charges together. Evidence having been taken the defendant was bound over to keep the peace himself in L 20 and two sureties in L10 each.

Civil Action - His Honour took his seat at 11 a.m. – Helen Jordan v Thomas Ramsay Morton and Richard Morris - The hearing of this case in which the plaintiff claimed LI50 as damages for illegal distraint of cattle was resumed the case for the plaintiff having closed on the previous Friday. Mr Macalister appeared for the plaintiff Mr Russell for the defendant and the following gentlemen formed the jury Messrs W V Siddall (foreman), Jas. Thomson, R. Sinclair, and J Sherwood. Mr Russell in opening for the defendants said that if he were personally identified with the defendant Morton and stood in his shoes he would almost feel satisfied to leave the case where the plaintiff had left it and go no further. He thought the jury would agree with him that the whole of this claim had on the plaintiffs own showing a perfectly farcical aspect. Even if it was admitted for a moment that the plaintiff was acting under bona fides in coming into the Court with her claim there was still the fact that no actual damage had been proved. The sum of L10 had been paid into court but had the defendants been in possession of the information which came out in cross-examination on Friday nothing at all would have been paid in. The plaintiff said she had lost the milk of five cows but she gave no time alleging only that they had been giving six and a half gallons per day. It was the duty of the plaintiff to show what damage had been sustained but there was no evidence that the cattle had suffered to the extent of one shilling by the distraint. On the other hand two practical farmers would be called who would say that if the cows had calved as usual in the spring the value of the milk which plaintiff would lose would not exceed L3 and that without making any allowance for grass or labour. But the plaintiff did not admit for a moment that there had been a loss of L3 as there would necessarily be a great shrinkage in the milk in the winter owing to shortness of grass. Another question for the jury to consider was the bona fides of the plaintiff's statement as to the ownership of the cattle. They had been told that the plaintiff had bought the cows with her own earnings but on cross-examination it turned out that she had got three of them in lieu of rent for a place belonging to her husband which she said her husband gave to her. He (counsel) was not in the slightest degree afraid of the jury awarding the plaintiff any damages at all but he wished to correct an erroneous impression which might have been created by Mr Macalister namely that this was a case for exemplary or vindictive damages. It could not be so since there had been no improper motive on the part of the defendants. Morton had simply seized the cattle for rent which the plaintiff admitted was due and had done so under an honest belief that they were her husband's. Before the seizure neither the plaintiff nor her husband had said a word about them belonging to her and subsequently when Morton found that she claimed them as her property he re-turned them. Evidence would be called to show that the cattle had been driven away quite quietly that they had been put to graze in a good grass paddock and had been properly and regularly milked. The jury would also be told by witnesses for the defence that the seven cattle and the horse which had been distrained were only worth L2 a head all round that supposing they had been sold and never returned a fair claim for their value would only have been L2 each. Evidence for the defence was given by James Ramsay Morton, Richard Morris, Robert Craig, James McMaster, John Cameron, and George Inglis. Counsel addressed the jury and his Honour is summed up. After a quarter of an hour's consideration the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for L15. Mr Russell submitted that on the verdict the defendants and not the plaintiff were entitled to costs as the case might have been determined in the R.M. Court. After argument his Honour said he did not think it was a case of such importance that it could not have been heard in the R.M. Court. He would not therefore certify for costs and each party would have to pay their own. The Court then adjourned sine die.

Civil Action - Helen Jordan v Thomas Ramsay Morton and Richard Morris – (details of case and court process) Mr Macalister, in opening for the plaintiff, said she was the wife of George Jordan, residing at One Tree Point, and the defendants were Thomas Ramsay Morton and Richard Morris the latter being sued in his capacity as the bailiff who executed what was alleged to be an illegal distraint. The statement of claim set forth that on the 31st January last the defendant had wrongfully removed seven head of cattle, one horse and a saddle, the property of the plaintiff. The cattle were returned on the 7th February, but the plaintiff claimed £75 for the loss of profit during their detention £25 as special damages for injuries to the cattle and horse through the defendants neglect and ill-treatment and £750 as general damages. Richard Morris v John Cheyne (baker) was a claim for £14 11s 6d as commission in connection with the collection of book debts. Mr Macalister for plaintiff and Mr Russell for defendant. The case for plaintiff was that defendant had employed him to collect book debts in an assigned estate. The defendant declined to permit proceedings to be taken against those who would not pay stating that if he did so his cash business would be injured. Mr Macalister referred to a case which had been heard in the Supreme Court here and which he said was on all fours with the present case. Mr Justice Williams had then decided that where a man who was to get commission for certain services was prevented from completing his contract in consequence of an act of his employer the latter was responsible for the amount of the commission which he would otherwise have earned. The defence was that plaintiff was only entitled to commission on the amounts collected by him. After evidence, he was nonsuited with costs £1 1s.

Magistrates Court - Friday 19 February (before J W Poynton Esq. S.M.) – Alleged Assault on a Bailiff - Richard Morris sued Denis O'Keefe for L20 damages for assault and battery at Hedgehope on 18th December 1896 – Mr Wade Plaintiff; Mr Hall defendant. Mr Wade said that Morris had gone as bailiff to O'Keefe's place. O'Keefe reached home in the evening the worse for liquor and asked Morris what he was doing there saying he had a letter that authorised the bailiff to withdraw. This letter could not be found and Morris of course had to refuse to withdraw without authority. O'Keefe then treated Morris very roughly cruelly and savagely and turned him out of the house, Mrs O'Keefe brought Morris back afterwards and did the best she could for him but had not been able to alleviate the pain of an injured arm. Two doctors had been attending Morris whose injuries were of a harmful and annoying nature for man over 60 years of age. The case was one where a man obeying a process of the court had been treated in a ruffianly manner by a man who had taken too much drink. Richard Morris deposed that he had been acting as bailiff for the Magistrate's Court at O'Keefe's place at Hedgehope on December 18th. He was 69 years old. O'Keefe came home drunk at 9.30 in the evening. When asked for the letter warranting the bailiff to withdraw it could not be found. Morris said he could not withdraw without authority. O Keefe caught him by the left arm and pulled and hauled him about and then swung him round on his arm. Cross-examined he might have told a man with whom he had ridden part of the way to Rakahouka that he had injured himself by a fall in Deschler's hotel. Mr Hall said the defence was a denial of the assault. There would be the evidence of O'Keefe's wife and of two men who were in the house at the time of the alleged assault who would say that O'Keefe had never touched Morris in any way. All would say that Morris had been complaining at the time of illness and that he was in the doctors hands and that he had a fall two or three days before Deschler's backyard. The young man Hanning who had given Morris a lift on the road in his dray would say that he had to assist Morris into the dray as he was not able to get in himself. Mrs O'Keefe deposed that her husband had not laid hands on Morris but that he had ordered him out of the house and Morris had gone. She had given him a bed and he had had his breakfast next morning when O'Keefe saw him but said nothing. Morris had complained of ill-health. John Cooney and Cornelius O'Driscoll, labourers, who were in the room when O'Keefe came in and found the bailiff there gave corroborative evidence. Thomas Harming, junr., said that he gave Morris a lift in his dray on his way out to O'Keefe's. Morris had been talking of his weak condition. He had assisted Morris into the dray as he could not get in himself. The defendant gave evidence on his own behalf and denied that he had laid hands on Morris. He had ordered him out of the house because he wanted him to sleep in the men's hut. Richard Morris (recalled) said that he had fallen in Deschler's yard and injured his leg so that he could not get into the dray. That had nothing to do with the injury on his arm. He reiterated his former evidence. His Worship gave judgment for the defendant without costs.
