Evening Post newspaper Saturday 13 July 1872

Information has been received from the Hutt this morning that a farmer named Francis of Belmont was accidentally killed yesterday. He left his house in the morning to go into the bush for the purpose of felling timber and not returning in the evening his wife went to look for him. He was found dead crushed between two heavy logs heels uppermost. Apparently he had endeavoured to roll them down the hill and had somehow slipped between them. An inquest was to be held to-day but we have not yet ascertained the result.

Evening Post newspaper Tuesday 16 July 1872

An inquest was held on Saturday afternoon at the Hutt on the body of John Francis whose sudden death we have already announced. The verdict was accidental death.
