Accidents – Lately accidents have been more numerous than we have known for a long time past. On Saturday one of a serious character happened to Mr William Mason senior just outside his residence in Molesworth Street. He was mounted on a horse occasionally given to bucking and whether Mr Mason was not in the stirrups or whether he was off his guard it unfortunately happened that he was thrown close to his own gate. Concussion of the brain took place and he was wholly insensible until Tuesday and Dr Johnston has hopes that he will recover much more quickly than his age might have led his friends to have expected.

Wellington District Court – Tuesday 10 April (Before Mr Justice Ward) The Court opened at 10 am Mason v MacManaway

This case had been adjourned from the previous sitting to amend the declarations. Mr Buckley appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr H Brandon for the defence. In this case a claim of £100 was made, on the ground that the plaintiff had been placed on land by the defendant, but that after the plaintiff had been some time in occupation and had made improvements, it was found that the boundaries, as marked by defendant, were wrong, and the plaintiff was therefore obliged to purchase the land and improvements a second time at considerable extra expense.

Plaintiff deposed that on the 25th of January 1865, he had arranged with defendant that he should select him a piece of land at Pakuratahi. Had gone with defendant who had pointed out the boundaries of the land on which he was to settle. Paid for the land as pointed out by defendant.

William Mason the son of plaintiff, sworn I went according to instructions from my father up to the Pakuratahi, and saw the land pointed out by defendant. MacManaway recommended my father to buy 60 acres besides the land we originally intended to take, and he did so. About a month after my father had paid for the land at the Land Office, MacManaway came up and chained off the land and pointed us out the boundaries. He stopped at about half-a-chain from Harts whare. Hart then said that he always thought that that was his land. I fenced from the spot pointed out by defendant, as I was told by him that I was safe in doing so. When the Government Surveyor came up he differed about half-a-chain from the boundary pointed out by Mr MacManaway, so that all the improvements and fencing which we had done on what we supposed to be our land proved to be on Hart's land. Those improvements cost us about £130. We had to purchase this land from Mr Hart. The Government Surveyor valued the disputed piece of land at £77. The other items charged for are for necessary expenses that we were put to in getting Mr MacManaway to survey the land and point out boundaries. This concluded the case for the plaintiff. His Honor considered that no case had been shown, and, therefore, he must record a non-suit. Mr Buckley consented.

Mr William MASON – We regret to record the sudden death of Mr William Mason a very old and respected settler in this town – an event which occurred yesterday morning at about three o'clock. The deceased arrived in this settlement in the year 1842 in the London and had consequently been here twenty-four years. It may be remembered that he fell from his horse about four years ago and received a severe blow on the head from which he never wholly recovered. He was one of the founders of the Antipodean Lodge of the Order of Odd Fellow's and was perhaps the oldest member of the Order in Wellington. He was attended in his last illness by Dr Boor, the immediate cause of his death which was some-what sudden was apoplexy.

John Campbell v William Mason - action to recover £9, the alleged value of a bullock driven off plaintiff's land by defendant, at the orders of the executors of the estate of Mr Mason, senior. Mr Borlase appeared for the plaintiff and Mr Izard for the defendant. Mr Izard contended that the proper parties to be sued were the executors, and that no action could be taken against his client, who had only been acting under instructions. Mr Borlase objected on the grounds that an illegal act had been committed by defendant. The facts of the case were simply as follows - The late Mr Mason, father of the defendant, had a quantity of cattle depasturing on the lands of the plaintiff, and some years ago drove them off, leaving a sickly calf, unable to travel, on the ground as a present to the plaintiff. Time went on, and the calf grew strong, and was now a valuable bullock. Mr Mason senior was dead, and his son had without notice driven the animal away and taken possession of it, an act for which he was responsible. His Worship ruled that the action should have been brought against the executors of the estate, and entered a non-suit.

Evening Post newspaper 29 January 1913

"Mason's Steps" – To the Editor Sir - Now that the City Council has made new steps in the above locality, and as many recent arrivals do not know the origin of the steps, a few words in explanation may be useful. "Mason's Steps" were called after Mr William Mason, who had a blacksmith shop at the back of the now occupied by Mr George Mee's chemist shop. Mr Mason arrived in Wellington in 1842 in the "London". He carried on his business there for some years, and later on his son Mr William Frederick Mason, continued the business, and also that of an ironmonger in premises abutting on Lambton-quay.

In those days, and not many years afterwards, "Mason's Steps" were only steps in name, there was nothing more than a rough track through the manuka scrub, which track was used then, as the steps are now, for a short cut from Lambton-quay to Wellington Terrace. On the opposite side of the lane was a draper's shop erected and kept by Mr Cox, and these premises were afterwards occupied by another family named Mason as a dyer's and millinery shop, but this was a good many years afterwards, and the lane and steps took the name "Mason's Steps" from Mr Mason, as narrated above. Mr William Frederick Mason (who in after years was an inspector for the City Council) and Mr John Astill one of our oldest and respected settlers, and who still resides in Wellington, were brothers-in-law. They married sisters of the late Mr William Salmon.

It is many, many years since I first used "Mason's Steps", and my first remembrances of them was as a steep, slippery, and uneven track. The late Mr George Anderson, when a city councillor, took great pleasure in being the first man to have the steps laid down in concrete, and often that respected old settler used to ask his friends, with glowing pride, "What, do you think of them steps?" Many of the old settlers who used the steps have now "crossed the bar". Peace be to their ashes. I am, etc.,

#In Mr William Nathaniel Edward ("Ted") Mason, who passed away last Thursday, there died one whose family has been connected with Wellington since its earliest days. The late Mr Mason's father and grandfather arrived in 1842, and though Mr Mason was born in Sydney in 1852 his family returned to Wellington the same year, and he spent his life here. In the early days this family lived in probably the first two-storeyed house in Wellington, situated on the site of Mr Mee's chemist shop in Lambton quay, and behind the house Mr Mason carried on business as a blacksmith. His father had an ironmonger's shop in the front of the house, and his grandfather a foundry on The Terrace, just above. "Mason's Steps" were first built to give access between the foundry and the home. Mr Mason had the contract for the ironwork and safes in the Government Buildings, and the old Wellington Hospital. Mr Mason later worked for a number of years in the Petone Government Workshops, leaving during the big strike. He later joined the City Tramways, in the old horse-car days, and was with the electric trams since their inception until he retired some four years ago. The funeral on Saturday was attended by a large number of the members of the tramway service. Mr Mason, leaves a widow and two sons, Messrs W E Mason and Mr A J Mason, both of Wellington. He is also survived by three brothers and a sister reference Papers past website Evening Post newspaper 14 May 1928
