Wellington - It was our painful duty in our last number to record the death of William Swainson, Esquire F.R.S. Mr Swainson was one of the earliest colonists, having been connected with this settlement from its formation but his name was well known in the annals of Science and Literature, having established to himself a European reputation by his different works on Natural History the following brief biographical sketch is therefore offered as a tribute to his memory. He was born in the year 1789, and was the eldest son of John T Swainson, Esquire for many years Chief Comptroller of Customs at Liverpool. He was appointed a Treasury Clerk in the Commissariat about the year 1805, and went abroad and served in Malta, the North of Italy, &c, until the peace, when he retired from the service. He then made two expeditions to Tropical America, and having made very large collections in Natural History, he returned to England. He then commenced his literary career, and wrote the Zoology portion of Murray's Encyclopaedia of Geography published the Birds of Brazil, Exotic Conchology, and finally the several volumes on Natural History (eleven in number) comprised in Laudner's Cyclopaedia. In 1840 Mr Swainson emigrated to New Zealand with his family, and has resided chiefly in this Settlement, having during the interval paid a visit of some duration to the Australian Colonies. Mr Swainson was also distinguished by his pencil no less than his pen, his talents as a draughtsman in natural history being of a very high order. Spectator 15 October.

Dictionary of National Biography

William SWAINSON (1789-1855) naturalist was born on 08 October 1789 at Liverpool, where his father who died in 1826 was collector of customs. His family had originally been statesman at Hawkhead in Westmoreland but his grandfather has also been in the Liverpool custom-house. His mother whose maiden name was Stanaway, died soon after his birth. At fourteen he was appointed junior clerk in the Liverpool customs but to gratify his longing for travel his father obtained him a post in the commissariat, and in the spring of 1807 he was sent to Malta, and shortly afterwards to Sicily, where he was mainly stationed during the eight following years. Before going aboard he drew up, at the request of the authorities of the Liverpool museum the Instructions for Collecting and Preserving Subjects of Natural History (privately printed Liverpool 1808) which was afterwards expanded in 1822 into his Naturalists' Guild (London 8vo; 2nd edit 1824). While in Sicily he made large collections of plants, insects, shells, fish and drawings of natural history objects visiting the Morea, Naples, Tuscany and Genoa. On the conclusion of peace in 1815 he brought his collects to England and retied on half-pay as assistant commissary-general. In the autumn of 1816 he started for Brazil with Henry Koster. A Revolution prevented their penetrating far into the interior and Swainson devoted himself mainly to collecting birds in the neighbourhood of Olinda the Rio San Francisco and Rio de Janeiro. Returning to Liverpool in 1818 he published a sketch of his journey in the Edinburgh Philosophical Journal and devoted himself to working out his zoological materials. At the suggestion of his friend William Elford Leach [q.v.] of the British Museum he learnt lithography so as to make drawings of animals suitable for colouring and in 1820 began the publication of Zoological Illustrations in which the plates are by himself (3 vols. 1820-3, with 182 coloured plates; 2nd ser. 3 vols. 1832-3). After five years residence in London, Swainson went on his marriage in 1825 to live with his father-in-law at Warwick and not receiving as large an access of fortune as he had expected on the death of his own father in 1826 he adopted authorship as a profession. He partly revised the entomology in London's Encyclopaedia of Agriculture and Gardening, and arranged a companion encyclopaedia of zoology. This plan was however merged in Lardner's Cabinet Cyclopaedia to which Swainson contributed eleven volumes from his own pen published between 1834 and 1840, besides on The History and Natural Arrangement of Insects (1840) written in conjunction with William Edwards Shuckard [q.v.]. In preparation for this of works he visited the museum of Paris in 1828 under guidance of Cuvier and St Hilaire and to be within reach of London settled at Tittenhanger Green near St Albans. From the first he adopted a quinary system based on the circular system of William Sharp Macleay [q.v.] and several volumes in the Cabinet Cyclopaedia series are devoted to elaborate expositions of these extremely artificial but professedly natural systems of classification in various groups of animals. Besides writing that portion of Sir John Richardson's Fauna Boreali-Americana that relates to birds with introductory Observations on the Natural System printed separately and furnished the article on the geographical distribution of man and animals in Hugh Murray's Encyclopaedia of Geography Swainson contributed three columns to Sir Williams Jardine's Naturalist's Library one dealing with the flycatchers (vol. xvii 1835) and the others with the birds of Western Africa (vols. Xxii, xxiii 1837). In 1837 having suffered pecuniary loses he emigrated to New Zealand. On the voyage out he lost a large portion of his collections but he took advantage of touching at Rio to take various plants to his new home to naturalise. In 1853 he was engaged by the Governments of Van Diemen's Land and Victoria to report on the timber trees of those colonies. Swainson died at his residence Fern Grover Hutt Valley New Zealand 07 December 1855.

Swainson was elected a fellow of the linean Society in 1816 and of the Royal Society on the recommendation of Sir Joseph Banks in 1820 and he was also a member of many foreign academies. By his first wife, a daughter of John Parkes of Warwick, whom he married in 1825 he had five children of whom four sons survived him and by his second wife who also survived him he had three daughters. An engraved portrait of him by Edward Francis Finden from a drawing by Mosses forms the frontispiece to his volume on Taxidermy in the Cabinet Cyclopaedia. His collect of Greek plants is in the herbarium of the Liverpool botanical garden.

As a zoological draughtsman Swainson combined accuracy with artistic skill and his papers in the Memoirs of the Wer-nerian Society Tilloch's Philosophical Magazine the Journal of the Royal Institution London's Magazine of Natural History the Magazine of Zoology and Botany the Entomological Magazine and the Papers of the Royal Society of Van Diemen's Land of which thirty six dealing with ornithology conchology entomology and trees are enumerated in the Royal Society's Catalogue (viii.893) contain descriptions of many species new to science.

Besides the works already mentioned Swainson was the author of 1. Ornithological Drawings series 1, Birds of Brazil, 5 parts 1834-5, 8vo. 2. Exotic Conchology, 6 parts, 1834-5 4to. 3. Preliminary Discourse on the Study of Natural History 1834 8vo. 4 Elements of Conchology 1835, 12mo. 5. Treatise on the Geography and Classifications of Animals 1835 8vo. 6. Treatise of the Natural History and Classification of Quadrupeds 1835 8vo. 7...of Birds 2 vols. 8...if Fishes Amphibians and Reptiles 2 vols. 1838 9. Animals in Menageries 1838 8vo. 10. The Habits and Instincts of Animals 1840 8vo. 11. Taxidermy with the Biography of Zoologists and notices of their works 1840 8vo. 12. A Treatise on Malacology 1840 8vo.

A work on New Zealand is sometimes assigned to the naturalists in error. It is by his namesake who is notices below [Autobiography in Taxidermy 1840, Gent Mag 1856, I 532-3; Proceedings of the Linnean Society 1855-6 p xlix] G.S.B.

#Death of Major Marshall - (Marton Advocate) - We regret to have to record the death of Major Marshall, through whose decease Rangitikei has lost one of its most esteemed and honoured residents. We are sure that our statement will be endorsed by all who were privileged to know the deceased, when we say that he was a gentleman, using the designation in its widest acceptation. The deceased was born in Yarmouth, County of Norfolk England in 1814, and was the eldest son of Captain Marshall, E.N. He entered the Army as ensign in the 65th Regiment in 1836, and was ordered to Canada, where he saw active service, having taken part there in the suppression of the rebellion in 1837-38. His regiment returned to England in 1841, and in 1846 was ordered to New South Wales, but on arrival there was sent on to New Zealand, on account of the Maori war having broken out in the North Island. They arrived in the Bay of Islands, but found that the war was over. In a few months, however, they were ordered to proceed to Wellington owing to the outbreak of hostilities with Te Rauparaha. The regiment then remained in Wellington until 1858 when it was ordered to Auckland, and then to Taranaki, on the outbreak of the war in 1860. In 1861, on the cessation of the war, the major retired on half pay and settled at Tutu Totara, in Rangitikei, in the beginning of 1862, where he continued to reside up to the time of his death. He was commander in the Militia and Volunteers during the subsequent Maori wars, during which he evinced great bravery and determination. On one occasion it is said, when the men were wavering and defeat seemed to be impending, he turned to them and said, You may go if you will, but I will stay here, and he infected them with his bravery for they stayed with him. He was twice married, first in 1849 to Mary, eldest daughter of William Swainson, F.K.S., who died in 1834; and next to Jane May Boulter, who also died in 1884. He had two sons by the first marriage, and one son and two daughters by the second. His death, which occurred on Wednesday, after two or three days illness, was due to natural decay. In tendering our sympathies to his relatives for his loss, we may yet say that they have the consolation arising from the memory of a life honourably spent and well worthy of imitation reference Papers Past website Wanganui Chronicle newspaper 28 November 1891 page 2

#Inquest at MARTON - An inquest was held before J Jordan, Esquire JP at Mr Polgreen's Hotel, on Friday last, on the body of Mr George Swainson, surveyor late of Wellington. H M Brewer deposed that he was in company with the deceased on the night of Wednesday last, and had received a bottle of medicine for him from Dr Hooper, which he had taken up to his bedroom, the deceased was then undressing, and did not complain of feeling ill to him, merely wished him good night on leaving the room. C Hooper MD, sworn, identified the body lying dead as George F Swainson, who had spent Wednesday evening in his company, most of the time playing a game of chess at the Marton Hotel, in Mr Coleman's private room. Going from there shortly after ten o'clock in company with the deceased and Mr Brewer, the deceased appeared to be very nervous and took me aside and complained of feeling unwell having had no sleep the previous night, and expressed the fear of having another bad night, and asked for some medicine. I saw him to his lodgings and returned for the medicine when I was suddenly called away to attend another patient, and in passing Mr Polgreen's I handed the medicine to Mr Brewer. On calling next morning about ten o'clock I was shown the room by Mrs Polgreen, and on entering I found Mr Swainson quite dead, lying with the right foot across the left, the left arm hanging over the edge of the bed, and the right arm bent with the hand resting on the side of the face, having evidently expired while in the act of stepping into bed. I have no doubt that death was caused by an attack of apoplexy. The jury returned a verdict of "Died from an attack of serious apoplexy" reference Papers past website Wellington Independent newspaper 13 October 1870 page 2
