

1918 INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC

Like most districts in New Zealand Upper Hutt was affected by the 1918 Influenza pandemic also known as the Spanish flu. Situated near Upper Hutt was the Trentham Military camp. Trentham had regular contact with the Featherston Military camp where the Influenza epidemic was rife. As a result the citizens of Upper Hutt were in real danger of contracting Influenza.

Around the middle of 1915 Trentham military Camp was occupied by over 7,000 men and as a result there was an early outbreak of influenza and other respiratory diseases resulting in the deaths of 33 service personnel. This early outbreak could not be compared to the later 1918 Influenza pandemic but some lessons were learnt and assisted with the later outbreak.

Many believe that the ship S.S. Niagara brought the Influenza epidemic to New Zealand. She berthed on 12 October in Auckland with New Zealand soldiers aboard as well as the Prime Minister Mr Massey and Minister of Finance Sir J G Ward. The 1918 Parliamentary papers recorded very strong debating and denial by the Government officials regarding the S.S. Niagara.

In the publication "Black Flue" by Geoffrey W Rice it mentions two troopships arrived in Auckland on 11 and 12 October with 80 serious flu cases aboard. Because of wartime censorship this was not reported in the newspaper. The ship was crowded with soldiers who came from army camps in southern England where the flu had started to spread. Discharged service personnel from these two ships began to return home and helped to spread the influenza around New Zealand.

Around 26 September 1918 it was reported that there were 400 influenza cases at Trentham Military Camp but the Government authorities insisted that it was a mild flu outbreak.

The Trentham Military Camp Quartermaster Major Thomas McCristell was influential in organising and providing beds, blankets, mattresses and equipment for the numerous temporary influenza hospitals set up around the Wellington region during the epidemic. Medical orderlies from the Trentham Military Camp volunteered and assisted other local volunteers in the temporary hospitals. The Hutt Valley milk supplies were maintained by soldiers from Trentham Camp. The soldiers also assisted local farmers and butchers with the demand. It has been recorded that the army saved the situation in the Wellington region.

The Registrar General recorded 383 deaths from Influenza in the Wellington region for the months of October, November and up to 6th December 1918.

Statistic from the publication "Black November" by Dr Geoffrey Rice records:

Upper Hutt	population of 1,554	6 deaths
Hutt County	population of 5,843	23 deaths
Trentham Military Camp	population of 3,270	77 deaths
Featherston Military Camp	population of 7,800	177 deaths

03rd December 1918

The Hon. Minister of Internal Affairs Wellington

With further reference to your memo of the 08th ultimo, I beg to advise that the following deaths from influenza, &c., were reported to-day:- [2 pages recording other district]

Upper Hutt = 7

(Reference Archives NZ Wellington BDM 1 365 1918/171-199 Registered inwards letters year 1918 description 1918/199 Notifiable diseases)

New Zealand Times newspaper 05 December 1918

There have been twelve deaths recorded in the district (including the three at the Upper Hutt emergency hospital) five in the country and seven in the township and of these three were soldiers, four soldiers wives, one a soldier's child, and two had soldier lodgers, only two were un-associated with soldiers or camp.

(Reference Papers past website New Zealand Times & Dominion newspaper 05 December 1918)

By using the details from the above newspaper article I believe I have identified the twelve deaths. From this compiled list I have also written some short stories about the effects of the Influenza epidemic on the different families and the Upper Hutt community.

World War one officially ended on 11th November 1918 and on the next day Upper Hutt recorded the death of its first influenza victim a railway shunter named John Brown.

Upper Hutt Epidemic Committee

The local community officials formed the Upper Hutt Epidemic committee and began to organise themselves with the assistance of Major Pettit of the New Zealand Medical Corps stationed at the Trentham Military Camp.

The local Epidemic committee consisted of, Thomas Arthur Ballantyne (Upper Hutt postmaster), John Thomas Benge (saw-miller, farmer & storekeeper), George Archibald Campbell (timber merchant & saw-miller), Frederick William Connell (Upper Hutt schoolmaster), Constable James Michael Cummings (Upper Hutt police constable), Thomas John Devine (farmer), William Henry Edwards (carter livery stables proprietor), William George Goss (wood & coal merchant later Town Board commissioner), William Grieg (engine driver), Constable Sydney Benjamin Gurdon (Police constable), George Humphrey Guthrie (NZR engine driver & former Town Board commissioner), Angus John McCurdy (farmer, former Town Clerk & Town Board Commissioner), Major William Haddow Pettit (Doctor NZ Medical Corps & Missionary), Peter Robinson (coachbuilder & blacksmith & Town Board chairman later Mayor) and Leonard Thomas Russell (farmer).

The Government had ordered that all school in the Wellington region were to be closed until further notice. The Upper Hutt School was closed from November 1918 to 04 February 1919. The local Influenza committee established and set up a temporary hospital at Upper Hutt School.

The committee also made arrangement with George Gerald Tolhurst chairman of Heretaunga Epidemic committee who undertook to provide convalescent accommodation at the Royal Wellington Golf Club house in Heretaunga for the hospital patients in return for the reception, and treatment of Heretaunga patients at the Upper Hutt temporary hospital. Unfortunately Mr Tolhurst did not follow through with his promise and the hospital patients had to be sent home to convalesce. The Upper Hutt Epidemic Committee did however keep their side of the arrangement and provided hospital accommodation for the Heretaunga influenza victims.

Temporary Emergency Hospital – Upper Hutt

Major Pettit and his wife Matron Pettit were attached to the NZ Medical Corps at Trentham Military Camp. They both took charge of the emergency hospital with the assistance of many. Constables Cummings and Gurden gave great support to the medical staff as did various other members of the military force. Local women and men excelled themselves in supporting the hospital and the community during the emergency.

The women workers at the Normal School temporary hospital were delighted yesterday at the advent of 12 orderlies from Trentham Camp who came in and scrubbed the whole place out and rendered much relief to the V.A.D.'s who were all very busy looking after the many patients.

(Reference Papers past website New Zealand Times newspaper 18 November 1918 page 3)

The article above makes one believe that the temporary hospital was established before the 18 November as quoted in other newspaper articles.

After setting up the temporary hospital at Upper Hutt School the first day was Monday 18 November 1918 where its first five patients arrived after noon. The emergency hospital operated for 27 days and closed on Saturday 14 December 1918. By using information from the newspaper articles we have created a draft time line.

Monday 18 November 1918

Medical Volunteers

Doctor - Major Dr William Hadow Pettit

Matron - Mrs Letitia Greacen Pettit nee Campbell wife of Major Dr William Hadow Pettit

Volunteers 3 locals

Jessie Margaret McCurdy or either Flora Mary McCurdy - Angus J McCurdy's daughter

Miss Eileen May McInnes – daughter of Mrs Huggin's Lydia Esther

Miss Jane Ruby Lindsay daughter of Alexander and Amelia Lindsay of Mangaroa

Patient = 5 patients were admitted to the temporary hospital

Mrs Ellenore Flanagan wife of soldier Henry John Flanagan. Mrs Flanagan's un-weaned twin babies accompanied her to the hospital

4 other patients unknown

Comments

Angus J McCurdy (who then held no office on the committee) called at 6 pm to ask if he could do anything more, he found the matron and his daughter had nothing to eat since morning and that a pound of tea, six pounds of sugar, a pound of butter and two 2 lb. loaves had been supplied by order of the assistant police constable to feed, five patients, the matron and her three women helpers. Seeing that the matron and his daughter looked fagged - what with men and women patients needing "inhalation" treatment and persistent poulticing [sic] and unrelaxed attention, and having two un-weaned hungry babies to pacify as test they could - he asked his daughter to make a pot of tea for the matron and herself while he looked after the crying twins. But when the tea was made it was found there was no milk so he handed over the babies he had quieted and made off for John Lanner's with the biggest, jug he could lay his hands on, and John Larmer filled it with the best milk of his farm refused to take payment for it and told McCurdy he could get more if he needed it. When the matron came from the sick-rooms and found the frugal tea ready she realised she had overtaxed herself and would have fallen if Miss McCurdy hadn't caught her and helped her to a chair. Hec

Benge and Bernie Judd "blew in" and were given a Flanagan twin each to keep, them out of mischief, and their Pacificist efforts with the bairns proved almost as exhilarating to the two tired women as their belated cups o' tea. Hearing of the shortage of milk the "boys" went off, Bernie returning with a gallon or more in a big enamelled billie while Hec bought a couple of quarts in bottles. So much for the first-day's provisioning.

Comment

The second day was as bad, except that eight full-sized mutton cutlets off the leg, and a quantity of old potatoes were sent to Mrs Phil Davis by the assistant constable with, a request, she should cook them for the evening meal. But when senior-constable Cumming got to the school with the viands he found Mrs Huggins had already sent down a dainty tea for her daughter (Miss McInnes) and Miss McCurdy and the eight lukewarm mutton cutlets stuck together with congealed fat, and the dish of cooled mash potatoes went a begging. One of the cutlets was warmed up by Miss Lindsay next day for the children removed to Mac's cottage and the other seven went off and were fed to stray animals.

The evening meal for the staff often as many as nine was prepared by Mrs Huggins from 19 November to 13 December, twenty-five successive nights, and Miss Morpeth drove down to the school with it every night so everything got there "pie on". If "Mum", had heard what the "boys" and the nurses said of the tastiness of the lay out, she would have felt that her efforts were appreciated by the staff. Milk was freely supplied to Mrs Huggins by Mrs Harrison, and meat, vegetables and groceries were supplied on order. When one case to mind that Mrs Huggins had her houseful of boarders to look after, and that her daughter Miss McInnes was laid up with the flu' from 21 November when she went home from the hospital "played out", until 29 November, it can be easily understood why Old Mac classes Mrs Higgins as one of his best helpers.

Breakfasts, "teas" and evening meals, arranged for, left only the midday meals to fix patients light, medium or full diets according to condition and full meals for nurses and ordlies. For the first few days the dinners were prepared by Mesdames W and A Keys, Morrison and Read, and invalid extra fare by Mesdames G Benge, "Son" Mabey, Harrison and J. Whiteman but the transport officer, Tom Devine, was not equal to the running about and suggested he have a car to do the running about in. As the car hire would cost more than the food-bills, Mac at once made other arrangements and from Monday, 25 November, to Friday, 13 December, Mrs Willie Keys supplied the hospital with beef-tea, barley-broth and prepared the invalid's midday meal, and for the same period Mrs Read of Station street prepared the one pm dinner for the staff materials supplied in the same way as to Mrs Huggins, except that all the milk was supplied to them free by E J Beavis. It must not be forgotten that the fuel and dozens of little things used in cooking these meals were supplied by three women helpers.

Major Pettit, F W Connell and A J McCurdy were placed in sole charge of the hospital, and the same evening F W Connell asked McCurdy to take over the providing and other detail and supply work of the hospital and on his undertaking to do so, remarked "then I'll leave the supplies for the hospital entirely to you – that's off my mind now" and so "Old Mac" - who had organised a Farmers Union of over 25,000 members, and also [with A Leigh Hunt and Sir J O Wilson] formed the Farmers' Co-operative Distributing Co and outlined the Dominion Cooperative Farmers Institute, let about the organisation of the working of Upper Hutt

Epidemic Hospital and in all interior arrangements first obtained the approval of Major Pettit and the matron - for work performed outside he studied the convenience of the helpers.

"What about the washing - we have to change some of the patient's bedding every few hours, and we'll soon be run-out of blankets at this rate and we are short of towels?" - so said the matron on Wednesday afternoon. The Trentham Laundry couldn't do the work, and every person who took in washing or went out washing by the day was fully occupied looking after sick relatives, and the pile of soiled equipment, grew bigger and bigger. At last when it appeared impossible to get anything done, Tom Devine quietly remarked to McCurdy "My old woman says she'll do the washing for the hospital, if you're stuck" and her offer was gratefully accepted. Old Woman indeed - she'd lose any three of the younger ones as a toiler. With six of her household just getting over the flu, eight or nine persons in the house to cook for, and charging nothing for the soap, soda, &c, or her services, this dame of 69 years of age had her fires going at daylight and had her hospital washing finished before breakfast-time, and if weather permitted everything dried and folded before 9 am. Only on one occasion, when there was a double dose of fouled bedding, did she ask for help, and Mrs W Cuneen volunteered and helped her. To Mrs T Devine the people owe their best thanks.

Comment

Mention of the chemist's shop reminds us that if Harold Rodier Gibbs had thought more of making money than he did of the welfare of the people of Upper Hutt he would have opened one of the chemist shops in Wellington which had been closed owing to illness of the owners, and simply coined money - opening his Upper Hutt shop from 4 pm. But he placed the matter before the Epidemic Committee to decide whether he would be doing best service to the country by putting in half a day in town and the rest here or by remaining here. The committee thought it unwise to lose his services for any part of the day, and on the suggestion of Secretary McCurdy expressed its appreciation of H R Gibbs' public-spirited conduct. It is also pleasant to record that although no arrangement was entered into re prices of medicine and equipment the charges he made in his bill to the committee were so low that that there must be little or no profit for him in the transactions. Well don, Harold.

"An Army moves on its belly" is an old-time saying, and the present war has proved that in the end Victory marches with the army whose soldiers can rely upon being kept supplied with a pinnyful of tucker. So also, does the cook help the doctor in a war on sickness of any sort.

The first, thing McCurdy did when the providing, &c was entrusted to him, was to arrange with the doctor and matron that anything needed should be entered on the blackboard at once and if urgent phoned to him at the courthouse or Record Hall. A Perfection Kerosene Cooking stove had been lent by Mrs W Greig, and he borrowed another from Mrs J Harrison so that in addition keeping pace with the continuous demand for hot, water for poulticing, fomentations, water-bottles sterilising, hot lemon drinks, washing-up, &c there would be burners to spare to cook bacon, eggs and porridge for breakfast, and as one or more of the orderlies was always anxious to "show-off" as cook, the staff and patients breakfasts were cooked on tin premises and all McCurdy had to do was to keep the larder full and see there was enough fuel and kerosene on hand. The 6 and 11 Morning Teas, the Afternoon Tea, and the Bedtime Teas for patients and staff were similarly provided for - biscuits had to be bought as appeals to the public for gifts of cakes were only responded by two or three people.

Comment

When Tom Devine sought the use of a car to take the meals to the hospital, the secretary was relieved of anxiety on that score by Gilbert Kirker and Geoffrey Pearse turning up at the courthouse with their bikes and volunteering to run all messages. These boys were invaluable as messengers, transporters of materials and crockery to the cook-helpers, carrying meals physic, etc., to the hospital and. taking the washing to and fro at all hours. Always willing, cheerful, and keen to help-giving up their holiday to assist in fighting the flu', those boys put up an excellent record.

Influenza Epidemic certificate

(Reference from descendant and researcher Howard Wardell)

After the epidemic the Government made a decision to award a certificate of thanks to the volunteers of the 1918 Influenza epidemic. It was awarded to those who assisted in the community and the various temporary emergency hospitals. Above is an example of a certificate awarded to Mrs Ivy Goodyer who volunteered in the Wellington region.

Temporary Emergency Hospital Upper Hutt

0- Doctor John Stuart MONRO born about 1889 died 1971 New Zealand
#Upper Hutt - The organising committee, with Mr F W Connell as chairman on duty at the courthouse, has attended to the wants of the district in a wholehearted manner. Every home needing assistance has been visited on notice being received. Dr Munro, the local medical practitioner, has been laid up since the epidemic struck the locality, and his place has been filled by Major Pettit, NZMC, who has worked untiringly, night and day, with excellent results. The public school has been turned into a hospital, under the charge of a qualified matron, Mrs Pettit, wife of Major Pettit, and splendid work is being done there by a small band of willing workers reference Papers past Dominion newspaper 25 November 1918
#During the next few days Dr Munro had a very busy time and on Saturday 16 November, he had to lay up reference Papers past website Dominion newspaper 05 December 1918 page 8

Dr Pettit died in an Auckland Private Nursing home in December 1985 and an obituary was published in the New Zealand Herald on 17 December 1985 the day following his death.

#Information about a photograph of Major & Matron Pettit in the 1985 newspaper article was quoted as been "hung in the borough council chambers" but it is not known where the photograph is now located or stored.

#There is a photograph of the 1918 Influenza committee on the Upper Hutt recollect website heritage collection which includes Dr William Pettit and other men of the Upper Hutt district. Perhaps this is the photograph quoted in the 1985 newspaper article.

Hundredth Birthday for Hero

Dr WILLIAM PETTIT the almost forgotten hero of Upper Hutt during the worldwide influenza epidemic in 1918, celebrated his 100th birthday on Saturday.

He's credited with saving many lives and for some years a portrait of the then Major Pettit, and his wife, a trained nurse, hung in the borough council chambers.

Today Dr Pettit lies in a bed at St Andrew's Hospital, St Heliers, Auckland, going out by taxi weekly to attend Sunday church.

The 1918 epidemic killed millions – more than the First World War – and when it struck in Upper Hutt, Major Pettit was medical officer at Trentham Camp.

Upper Hutt Primary School was turned into a hospital, and the major placed in charge. He and his wife worked night and day. They would "doss down" as opportunity offered.

"Her was a hero," says 79-year –old Henry Salisbury of Maoribank, who as a Standard five pupil at the time can remember the event but barely the man.

"He spent himself for others," says 86-year-old May Poulsen of Weka Grove, who remembers him better because he was a frequent visitor to the home of her family – the Hazelwoods.

And her 82-year-old husband Hec, says simple that Dr Pettit saved his life.

"I was 15 at the time of the "flue," he says. "I nearly died." In fact, there's a period of a week on which his mind is a complete blank.

Dr Pettit was born in Nelson, and went to Dunedin to study medicine when he was 16. He served in Bangladesh for five years as a Baptist medical missionary before returning to New Zealand.

A committed Christian he became known through the country as a preacher, first as a Baptist and later as a member of the Open Bretheren.

What was he like?

"A tall, strapping man," as Mr Salisbury remembers. "He was regarded as a gentleman," says Mrs Poulsen. He was also something of a debater. Mr Salisbury remembers him debating creation and evolution with Professor Hunter (after whom the Hunter Building at Victoria University was named) in the Wellington Town Hall. Though we had some difficulty obtaining information from the hospital, we were able to learn that Dr Pettit celebrated his birthday with a small party of relatives, and that he received a large number of messages.

0- Thomas John DEVINE born about 1851 died 30 October 1933 New Zealand married 1873 New Zealand Anne Eliza WOOD born about 1856 died 30 July 1933 New Zealand

#Thomas John Devine (farmer) of the Upper Hutt Epidemic Committee
#For the first few days the dinners were prepared by Mesdames W and A Keys, Morrison and Read, and invalid extra fare by Mesdames G Benge, "Son" Mabey, Harrison and J. Whiteman but the transport officer, Tom Devine, was not equal to the running about and suggested he have a car to do the running about in - When Tom Devine sought the use of a car to take the meals to the hospital, the secretary was relieved of anxiety on that score by Gilbert Kirker and Geoffrey Pearse turning up at the courthouse with their bikes and volunteering to run all messages. These boys were invaluable as messengers, transporters of materials and crockery to the cook-helpers, carrying meals physic, etc., to the hospital and. taking the washing to and fro at all hours. Always willing, cheerful, and keen to help-giving up their holiday to assist in fighting the flu', those boys put up an excellent record.

#Tom Devine quietly remarked to McCurdy "My old woman says she'll do the washing for the hospital, if you're stuck" and her offer was gratefully accepted. Old Woman indeed - she'd lose any three of the younger ones as a toiler. With six of her household just getting over the flu, eight or nine persons in the house to cook for, and charging nothing for the soap, soda, &c, or her services, this dame of 69.years of age had her fires going at daylight and had her hospital washing finished before breakfast-time, and if weather permitted everything dried and folded before 9 am. Only on one occasion, when there was a double dose of fouled bedding, did she ask for help, and Mrs W Cuneen volunteered and helped her. To Mrs T Devine the people owe their best thanks.

#Mention of the chemist's shop reminds us that if Harold Rodier Gibbs had thought more of making money than he did of the welfare of the people of Upper Hutt he would have opened one of the chemist shops in Wellington which had been closed owing to illness of the owners, and simply coined money - opening his Upper Hutt shop from 4 pm. But he placed the matter before the Epidemic Committee to decide whether he would be doing best service to the country by putting in half a day in town and the rest here or by remaining here. The committee thought it unwise to lose his services for any part of the day, and on the suggestion of Secretary McCurdy expressed its appreciation of H R Gibbs' public-spirited conduct. It is also pleasant to record that although no arrangement was entered into re prices of medicine and equipment the charges he made in his bill to the committee were so low that that there must be little or no profit for him in the transactions. Well done Harold

Heretaunga Epidemic Committee

The committee also made arrangement with George Gerald Tolhurst chairman of Heretaunga Epidemic committee who undertook to provide convalescent accommodation at the Royal Wellington Golf Club house in Heretaunga for the hospital patients in return for the reception, and treatment of Heretaunga patients at the Upper Hutt temporary hospital. Unfortunately Mr Tolhurst did not follow through with his promise and the hospital patients had to be sent home to convalesce. The Upper Hutt Epidemic Committee did however keep their side of the arrangement and provided hospital accommodation for the Heretaunga influenza victims.
