Daily Southern Cross – 26 February 1856

February 25 – Oriental, barque, 500 tons, J C Macey, from London, Passengers – Alexander and Fanny LECKY. The Oriental, barque arrived yesterday from London and Portsmouth after a pleasant passage of 108 days from the later port. The Oriental had to work down the Channel against a westerly wind. She experienced no North-east trades and made rather a tedious voyage of 31 days to the equator. On the 4th of January the Oriental passed in sight of Tristin D'Acunda and on the 11th in lat 41 south was in the meridian of the Cape. She made her easting in 48 south and had generally fresh breezes from the North-west. Since passing Van Diemen's Land the Oriental has had to contend with a good deal of light northerly weather and has been some time in making her northing. On the 21st instant she was off the Three Kings and has had nothing but light weather till nearing the North Head when it came on fresh from the north-east. The Oriental has on board 41 cabin and second cabin and 26 steerage passengers of whom 32 are for Canterbury and 35 for Auckland. She had also large cargo about one half of which is destined for Canterbury. On the 27th November and addition was made to the population of the Oriental; the interesting name given to the stranger will be found in our published list of passengers. The Captain sighted a barque and a topsail schooner off the Three Kings supposed to be bound for this port. The barque however was probable the American spoken by the Adah. The Weather during the voyage of the Oriental had been on the whole remarkably fine. Unfortunately the latest paper on board was dated 4 November so that she brings us no additional intelligence.
