Important Note - There are numerous letters written by people in reply to a request from Augustus HEINE for information about the early German settlers. Augustus wrote to various descendants of the St Pauli & Skiold emigrants who settled in the Nelson area. There are copies of the letters at the Nelson Provincial Museum and on microfilm at Alexander Turnbull Library. This series of correspondence is most valuable when trying to trace the passengers of the ships St Pauli and Skiold.

Beckmann is a joiner, and has a wife and four children already. When at Hamburg, he had bought eighty acres of land from Mr Beit; but whether he will ever get any is a great question. He works as a shipbuilder and earns 1/. 5s a week. He has a cow, pigs, and also poultry.

The following live in what is called the town of Nelson, which looks rather like a great village than a town, as everywhere town acres have been or are being brought into cultivation, and sown with corn; and there are but few houses in proportion to the plane of the town. All the above have houses if their own, in which they live.

Schuster is a shoemaker; has a wife and three children. He works at his trade, and has good earnings. In the way of land and stock he has only a garden, one cow, and nine goats.

The following live in what is called the town of Nelson, which looks rather like a great village than a town, as everywhere town acres have been or are being brought into cultivation, and sown with corn; and there are but few houses in proportion to the plane of the town. All the above have houses if their own, in which they live.

Schumacher is a joiner, and works at his trade. He has a wife and child. He has three and a half acres of land with corn and potatoes, two cows and seven one and two-year-olds. He is the wealthiest of the Germans in the town.

The following live in what is called the town of Nelson, which looks rather like a great village than a town, as everywhere town acres have been or are being brought into cultivation, and sown with corn; and there are but few houses in proportion to the plane of the town. Somewhere to the right near the wood lives another man, Ovyne, whose wife remained behind in Germany. He has a house, and three acres with corn. Next to him lives an Englishman, who has married a Germany emigrant. They have now two children, a house, five acres with corn, six oxen, and nearly thirty cows and calves. He is also a labourer.

The Nelson Examiner and New Zealand Chronicle newspaper 15 July 1843

To The Editor of the Nelson Examiner

Sir — As you have been kind enough to remark in your postscript to Messrs. Beit and Wilson's letters that I am at liberty to avail myself of your paper to reply, I beg leave to tender you the following lines, which I consider necessary to exonerate myself from the charges made against me.

When I offered my vessel to the New Zealand Company to take a force to any part of the islands, I made it on the following conditions for the Company to assist me in landing the cargo (which, with their assistance, might have been done in two days), and Mr. Beit allowing me (being under charter to him as the German immigration agent) to keep the bricks on board as ballast; and then I should have been at liberty to undertake the expedition. So much for that.

Now a few words respecting the accusation of Mr. Beit, charging me with behaving ill to English persons who came by my vessel. This scarcely requires confutation, and therefore I will leave it to others to judge of its truth at the same time, I deny the veracity of it; and I flatter myself I may appeal to tire respectable inhabitants of this settlement to visited my vessel on its arrival at this port, and whom Mr. Beit endeavoured to drive away; whilst I, on the contrary, invited the gentlemen to come on board, and made them welcome, but told them that the cabin was not under my charge. Since then I have been several weeks in port, during which time I presume the inhabitants of this place have learnt something of the character and behaviour of both parties, from which they will doubtless draw their own conclusions.

What Mr. Beit writes respecting the survey of the British Consul at Bahia of the state of the ship and the emigrants, is partly untrue and partly misrepresented. The survey was not called at Mr. Beit's request, but in consequence of the emigrant's complaints to the British Consul. The survey, which was very superficial, was made by Captains Petre and Selkirck, neither of whom could speak German. No notes were taken at the time, and the interpreter (the secretary to the British Consul) was so displeased with the manner in which the survey was conducted, that, on its completion, he went on shore, leaving the two captains on board as guests of Mr. Beit. The award was not made before the following morning, and this, with the champagne drank over night, accounts for the difference between the award of the captains and that of the British Consul, as forwarded to London and delivered here.

As regards the highly respectable English gentleman, Mr Alexander Wilson, as Mr. Beit describes him, I deny ever having spoken one single word either for or against him, although I have known him some years at Bahia, having been there several times, and frequently purchased small stores out of his shop. Mr Wilson (I suppose instructed by Mr. Beit) has never spoken to me, and, therefore, I took no notice of him.

It is true that Mr Wilson and another gentleman remained on board one night, as I refused to give Mr Beit a boat after ten o'clock. This I did in consequence of Mr. Beit and his friends making use of insulting language to my wife during my absence, in the hearing of my mates, and had it not been for my return, they would have interfered. Concerning the arrest of Mr. Wilson by the water police, it occurred in the following manner. Neither M. Beit nor Mr Wilson gave me to understand that the latter intended to proceed in the ship with me. I only heard it in the town that Mr Wilson intended to abscond in my vessel. Upon being asked by the police if I had any passengers from Bahia, I answered that there was one in the cabin, upon which the police immediately went below, and finding that he (Mr. Wilson) had no passport, they took him on board the guard-ship, where he was confined for two days, obliging me to bring up again (being then under sail), and remain in the port for the same time. To prove that I had no ill-feeling towards Mr Beit and Mr Wilson, I must remark that, had I taken Mr Wilson from Bahia without a passport, I should have been liable to the penalty of £300, whenever I returned to the port again, which I enter nearly every year.

I am, & c,
P. Schacht,
Captain of the ship St. Pauli
