The first burial in the Presbyterian cemetery was for Ernest Albert Hawthorne on Monday 15 November 1897.

Evening Post newspaper 16 November 1897

The funeral of the murdered man Ernest Albert Hawthorne took place at Silverstream yesterday afternoon. There was a very large attendance of settlers and friends of the deceased and many wreaths betokened the high respect in which the unfortunate young man had been held. The body was buried in the new Presbyterian cemetery at Mungaroa. A number of Christian Endeavours were present and sang a hymn at the grave-side.

New Zealand Mail newspaper 25 November 1897

The remains were the first deposited in the new Presbyterian cemetery at Mungaroa about two miles from the Upper Hutt railway station as the crow flies and on the same range about six mile northward of the scene of the tragedy and the first burial.

Question: What was the tragedy and first burial?

Ernest Hawthorne lived in a hut on the hill above Silverstream and supplied the railway department with sleepers. Each Sunday he would attend church and was well respected by the local community. Frank Philpott arrived in town looking for a job. Ernest offered him a bed in the Hutt and job assisting him milling sleepers. The locals enquired with Frank asking where Ernest was and he replied that Ernest met a woman in Wellington and they had gone to the South Island together. The locals became suspicious as they knew Ernest would never leave Silverstream without saying goodbye.

The locals along with the Police began to search the hills. A local remembered that one night he saw a light flickering on the hill, so he began searching in that area and found a grave. The police located the body of Ernest and Frank was charged with the murder. Before Frank's execution he made a full confession that he "shed the blood of Ernest on the afternoon of 07 September 1897".

A headstone at Wallaceville cemetery reads:

"Erected by his fellow endeavours and friends to the memory of Ernest Alfred Hawthorne who departed this life - 07 September 1897 aged 19 years and 6 months".

(Reference Wallaceville Presbyterian Cemetery headstone transcriptions)

George Taylor was also buried at Wallaceville cemetery. He died in the tragic Upper Hutt Bengel and Pratt Store explosion in 1914.
