New Zealand Times newspaper 17 February 1875

A little girl two and half years of age named Ellen Lawrence daughter of Mr Wm Lawrence of the Mungaroa Saw-mills was found drowned in the Mungaroa River yesterday afternoon. When the body was recovered life was not quite extinct but she died in a short time afterwards before medical assistance could be procured. An inquest will doubtless be held to-day when the particulars of the event will be elicited.

New Zealand Times newspaper 19 February 1875

An inquest was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of the deceased's father on the body of the little girl Ellen Lawrence who was found drowned in the Mungaroa stream on the previous day. The evidence went to show that the unfortunate child in company with two other children was crossing a plank which bridged the stream and losing its balance fell into the water. The other children the oldest of whom was but seven years old did not give an alarm in time to procure assistance and the poor little girl had been carried down the flood over a hundred yards before she was rescued when life was almost extinct. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death by drowning.

Wairarapa Age newspaper 02 January 1914

News reached Carterton on Tuesday evening of the death at Mangamaire of Mr William Lawrence after a lengthy illness. Deceased was a very old resident of the Wairarapa and was born parish of St. Andrew Helborn London War veteran having been service when he was twenty years of age. He arrived in Wellington in 1857 in the sailing ship Southern Cross and was later married at the Upper Hutt to Miss Mary Ann Robinson. His wife pre-deceased him by some eight or nine years. The late Mr Lawrence was a saw-miller by occupation but for some time past had lived a retired life at Mangamaire. He leaves grown up family of five sons and five daughters.

#A little girl two and half years of age named Ellen Lawrence daughter of Mr Wm Lawrence of the Mungaroa Saw-mills was found drowned in the Mungaroa River yesterday afternoon. When the body was recovered life was not quite extinct but she died in a short time afterwards before medical assistance could be procured. An inquest will doubtless be held to-day when the particulars of the event will be elicited reference Papers past website New Zealand Times newspaper 17 February 1875 page 2
#An inquest was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of the deceased's father on the body of the little girl Ellen Lawrence who was found drowned in the Mungaroa stream on the previous day. The evidence went to show that the unfortunate child in company with two other children was crossing a plank which bridged the stream and losing its balance fell into the water. The other children the oldest of whom was but seven years old did not give an alarm in time to procure assistance and the poor little girl had been carried down the flood over a hundred yards before she was rescued when life was almost extinct. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death by drowning reference Papers past website New Zealand Times newspaper 19 February 1875 page 2
