Upper Hutt's new After Hours Medical Centre opened in late 1991, along with a commitment from the Upper Hutt Health Centre to join in. The new centre in Royal Street (opposite Paknsave) was to be staffed by all local GPs except those at the Health Centre. There was to be an opening ceremony on Friday conducted by Wellington Health Commissioner Sir Brian Elwood. One of the participating doctors, Penny Henley, said the clinic would be able to treat cuts that needed stitches, deal with asthma attacks and stabilise those suffering heart attacks (they would then be referred to hospital). The clinic didn't have X-ray facilities and anyone with suspected broken bones had the option of attending the clinic for a doctor's opinion or travelling to Hutt Hospital's emergency department to seek help there. Three of the participating doctors outside the new Royal Street after hours medical centre, Drs Erich Kusel, Nora Duffield and Mitch Blake. Dr Duffield had come from Zimbabwe in 1983. She left Upper Hutt in 2000 to help set up a clinic in the Wairarapa, and returned after 16 months, in November 2001; with considerable publicity in the 'Leader' in the preceding weeks. The Hutt Valley District Health Board recommended that a single after-hours centre should cover the whole Hutt Valley in November 2001. The centre had closed by December; patients could be faced with $75 taxi bills. A new Upper Hutt system started in June 2016, when the Silverstream doctors who had supported the Lower Hutt centre changed to cooperating with the Upper Hutt Health Centre, operating there 5-8 pm weekdays, 9-9 weekends, and 10-5 holidays

Doctor Denys HEGINBOTHAM (1949)

(Reference Upper Hutt City Library Heritage collection UH Leader newspaper 22 December 1987)

Dr Denys HEGINBOTHAM - Studied medicine at Otago University, Graduated 1949, House surgeon Wellington and Dannevirke. In Upper Hutt since 1951 as a newly-wed, first in Golders Road, then with Doctor Rainey in Wilkes Arcade, they were later joined by Doctor Ackroyd. Obstetrics and gynaecology training Auckland Women's Hospital 1955, and in London. Returned to Upper Hutt in 1958? Medical officer in charge Elderslea Maternity Hospital, when it opened in 1971 [1961] he had played a large part in getting the Wellington Hospital Board to establish it. Later he was consultant obstetrician and gynaecologist at Hutt Hospital. One of three doctors who set up Trinity House next to Gethings Motors. When more doctors came to Upper Hutt Trinity House could not accommodate them, Doctor Heginbotham presented a paper on improving health services to the council and out of that came the Upper Hutt Medical Centre. Not retiring 17 June 1986. Retired (at least from Elderslea) in December 1987 aged 65. Two terms on the Wellington Hospital Board. Royal Humane Society bronze medal 1952, for attending a miner injured in a Rimutaka tunnel rockfall. Appointed to the Abortion Supervisory Committee in December 1980 viewed as a non-liberal. He and Doctor S C Hawe of Timaru had replaced doctors Bruce Grieve and Heather Thomson as a result the third member Mrs Vivienne Boyd had resigned. Involved in establishing the Upper Hutt Club in the former Catholic presbytery building. Past president of the Heretaunga Probus Club, and Upper Hutt Chamber of Commerce. Also involved with the Order of Saint John. Learned Mandarin AFS study tour of China sponsored Zhimin Yu who spoke at his funeral as his son. Appeared in a 1997 series of Why I (heart) Upper Hutt features in the Leader picture was reprinted with the 22 April 1998 obituary which supplied most of the information above.

(Reference Upper Hutt City Library Heritage collection Doctor Denys Heginbotham Biography)

In September 1952 a Mr Athanassiabes a miner was trapped by a rock fall at the Mangaroa end of the Remutaka tunnel. For many hours Dr Heginbotham remained in the tunnel with the injured miner. For this the Doctor received the Royal Humane Society bronze medal.

The Reid family home Gatehouse. It was located at Maoribank. An unidentified woman can be seen standing against the house on the far left of the photograph. The Wolseley car in the driveway of the house belongs to Dr Kemp.

Dr Kemp's surgery was said to have been in the Greenwoods boarding house on the west side of Main Road and Pine Avenue. Dr Kemp resided a mile away opposite Wallaceville railway station. The Greenwood surgery was perhaps the boarding house where the Mall is now situated in the Upper Hutt township.

Upper Hutt's new After Hours Medical Centre opened in late 1991, along with a commitment from the Upper Hutt Health Centre to join in. The new centre in Royal Street (opposite Paknsave) was to be staffed by all local GPs except those at the Health Centre. There was to be an opening ceremony on Friday conducted by Wellington Health Commissioner Sir Brian Elwood. One of the participating doctors, Penny Henley, said the clinic would be able to treat cuts that needed stitches, deal with asthma attacks and stabilise those suffering heart attacks (they would then be referred to hospital). The clinic didn't have X-ray facilities and anyone with suspected broken bones had the option of attending the clinic for a doctor's opinion or travelling to Hutt Hospital's emergency department to seek help there. Three of the participating doctors outside the new Royal Street after hours medical centre, Drs Erich Kusel, Nora Duffield and Mitch Blake. Dr Duffield had come from Zimbabwe in 1983. She left Upper Hutt in 2000 to help set up a clinic in the Wairarapa, and returned after 16 months, in November 2001; with considerable publicity in the 'Leader' in the preceding weeks. The Hutt Valley District Health Board recommended that a single after-hours centre should cover the whole Hutt Valley in November 2001. The centre had closed by December; patients could be faced with $75 taxi bills. A new Upper Hutt system started in June 2016, when the Silverstream doctors who had supported the Lower Hutt centre changed to cooperating with the Upper Hutt Health Centre, operating there 5-8 pm weekdays, 9-9 weekends, and 10-5 holidays

When Bill KEMP served overseas in World War 1 and Dr COZENS had charge of the practice, then Dr J MUNRO Trentham Camp had his own medical facilities and made use of Dr C H Izzard's home at Maoribank for rest and recuperation.

#A Popular Doctor Farewell Dance at Hospital - A jolly little dance was given at the Napier Hospital Nurses Home last evening, as a farewell to Dr Munro who has resigned from the hospital staff in order to visit England with the object of furthering his studies. About 30 couples were present and good floors and music were conducive to an enjoyable function which the affair undoubtedly was. The guests were received by the Matron (Miss R MacDonald) and the arrangement: were capably controlled by Sisters Hayden and Bridge- During the evening an opportunity was taken by Dr Gilray to present to Dr Munro an engraved silver card case on behalf of the matro, sisters and nurse, in making the presentation Dr Gilray referred to the pleasant relations that had existed between Dr Munro and the staff during the former's term at the hospital and also expressed his personal appreciation of the manner in which Dr Munro had carried out his duties. He stated that he would have no hesitation whatever in confidently leaving Dr Munro in charge of their institution or a larger one. The staff regretted exceedingly losing him but thought he was taking a wise step and heartily wished him a successful career. Dr Munro replied with feeling thanking the staff for their honour and expressing his appreciation of the good will and always ready assistance which had made his term so pleasant that he hated leaving the hospital. Prior to the dance last evening Dr Munro was met by patients in Ward 3 of the hospital and presented with a fountain pen as a tangible expression of the appreciation of the patients for the thoughtful treatment always accorded them by him reference Papers past website Hawkes Bay Tribute newspaper 23 August 1921 page 5

Hundredth Birthday for Hero - Dr WILLIAM PETTIT the almost forgotten hero of Upper Hutt during the worldwide influenza epidemic in 1918, celebrated his 100th birthday on Saturday. He's credited with saving many lives and for some years a portrait of the then Major Pettit, and his wife, a trained nurse, hung in the borough council chambers. Today Dr Pettit lies in a bed at St Andrew's Hospital, St Heliers, Auckland, going out by taxi weekly to attend Sunday church. The 1918 epidemic killed millions – more than the First World War – and when it struck in Upper Hutt, Major Pettit was medical officer at Trentham Camp. Upper Hutt Primary School was turned into a hospital, and the major placed in charge. He and his wife worked night and day. They would "doss down" as opportunity offered. "Her was a hero," says 79-year-old Henry Salisbury of Maoribank, who as a Standard five pupil at the time can remember the event but barely the man. "He spent himself for others," says 86-year-old May Poulsen of Weka Grove, who remembers him better because he was a frequent visitor to the home of her family – the Hazelwoods. And her 82-year-old husband Hec, says simple that Dr Pettit saved his life. "I was 15 at the time of the "flue," he says. "I nearly died." In fact, there's a period of a week on which his mind is a complete blank. Dr Pettit was born in Nelson, and went to Dunedin to study medicine when he was 16. He served in Bangladesh for five years as a Baptist medical missionary before returning to New Zealand. A committed Christian he became known through the country as a preacher, first as a Baptist and later as a member of the Open Brethren. What was he like? "A tall, strapping man," as Mr Salisbury remembers. "He was regarded as a gentleman," says Mrs Poulsen. He was also something of a debater. Mr Salisbury remembers him debating creation and evolution with Professor Hunter (after whom the Hunter Building at Victoria University was named) in the Wellington Town Hall. Though we had some difficulty obtaining information from the hospital, we were able to learn that Dr Pettit celebrated his birthday with a small party of relatives, and that he received a large number of messages. [Image with caption] Major William Pettit and his wife (we haven't been able to discover her name) photographed by Upper Hutt photographer G L Lay. The date is unknown, but the indications are that it could be about 1918.

Doctor Humphrey Barton RAINEY (1954)

(Reference Upper Hutt City Library Heritage collection Eric Wood collection)

Dr Humphrey Rainey Orongomai marae 1988

The Lower Hutt born Rainey came to live and work in the burgeoning town of Upper Hutt in the early 1950s after study at Otago University and work at Wellington and Hutt Hospitals as an anaesthetic registrar. In Dunedin he had met Patricia a trained nurse with whom he was to share 65 married years. The couple set up medical practice in Pine Ave in 1952 in a converted garage in their little brick house on the site of today's Angus and Burrell car business. Rainey then formed a partnership with Dr Denys Heginbotham and later Dr Bill Ackroyd. In 1956 the trio bought land opposite St Joseph's Church for Trinity House a purpose-built health centre. This the town's first group practice provided many services previously not available to locals. A day surgery was put in place and visiting obstetric and gynaecologist specialists worked regular days. It was very innovative and very, very popular Pat Rainey said. For 40 years Rainey was a visiting anaesthetist at Hutt Hospital and in the 1990s he worked several months long postings as a GP and anaesthetist in Niue and Western Samoa for the Ministry for Foreign Affairs. His later years were with part-time work at Lower Hutt's Ropata Medical Centre a practice he was long associated with. He fully retired from medical life in 2014. In the late 1960s Rainey became involved in the development of Upper Hutt's marae. Pat Rainey had already been active in the city's Ma-wai-hakona Maori Association which had set out on fundraising for an urban marae and community centre. Rainey attended a club meeting and on the back of his professional vision for money raising was voted chair for a committee dedicated to the task. A major push came with a 1970 Queen Carnival a two month campaign including a community ball a sponsored walk and other events which culminated in a 70 float procession before 15,000 onlookers and the naming of the Carnival Princess. More than $27,000 was raised towards the project's estimated $50,000 cost. Rainey was elected Orongomai president in 1972, replacing Tom Johnson. He was to remain in the position till the marae's 1976 opening and for many years afterward. His contribution on the Upper Valley Marae Community Centre Committee and as Orongomai president was recognised with an OBE Queen's Birthday honour for services to the Maori community. A prolific athlete in his college and university years Rainey also made a national contribution in rugby. After retiring from the Upper Hutt seniors because of the risk of more serious injuries compromising his professional life he took up refereeing. He progressed to first class level officiating and in 1971 was whistle man for the notorious Canterbury-British Lions clash which resulted in serious injuries to three visiting players. Rainey was a long-time board member of the Alcohol Liquor Advisory Council and was also chairman of the Medical Assurance Society.

#Medical Adviser Dr Tweed's Resignation - At a meeting of the Plunket Society Council Dr Tweed of Wellington tendered his resignation as medical adviser as from 31 May intimating however that as a voluntary worker he would continue his support. The resignation was accepted with sincere regret. Dr Tweed who is a trustee of the late Sir Truby King intends to proceed abroad at an early date to undertake post-graduate work and to continue his studies of infant welfare. Born in Ashburton and educated at Huntley School Marton and at Wellington College. Dr Tweed studied medicine at Guy's Hospital and at London University. Returning from active service, Dr Tweed in 1920 commenced practice at Carterton and became intimately associated with Sir Truby King and the work of the Plunket Society. The general conference of the Plunket Society in 1930 appointed Dr Tweed as successor to Sir Truby King to the office of honorary medical adviser to the council. In 1933 he became full time medical adviser to the Dominion Council and chairman of the medical advisory committee.
